It Took a Spark...

Fifty years is not a long period of time as time is measured. Yet the half-century mark in the existence of any person, place or thing is certainly a time for reflection, celebration, and expectation. It is a time to remember the past; it is a time to celebrate the present; it is a time to look forward to the commencement of a new era. It is time to realize that it took a spark to start the flame.

Fifty years ago the spark flashed within the hearts and minds of a group of pioneers who believed in and clung to the idea of a Church of God liberal arts college. Fifty years later, as the beneficiaries of their vision, we celebrate half a century of Pentecostal higher education in Cleveland, TN. The spark that started the flame in 1947 is still the driving force behind Lee College in 1997. You can see it in the eyes of the returning students and the teachers. You can see it in the faces of uninitiated who have come to write their own chapters in the Lee College story. Walking down the pedestrian mall on any given day, you can feel the spirit of the flame that pulsates through the glad movements of youth. If you close your eyes and listen during a convocation or chapel worship service, you can almost hear it.

As the years have passed, the burning flame of Lee College has been fanned and shaped through adversity, tragedy, and triumph. While the flame has indeed flickered, it has never extinguished by the shifting winds of changing times and changing conditions.

Not only did we reach 2000 before the year 2000, but we will almost certainly (if current trends continue) reach an undergraduate enrollment of 3000 and beyond before the year 2000. In reaching our current enrollment record, we become the second largest private university in the state of Tennessee in 1997 (next to Vanderbilt). Who would have ever dreamed of such a possibility? Walking hand in hand with the numerical growth has been an ever-present and unprecedented academic growth. In addition to the development of many new undergraduate degree programs, Lee College has moved forward in the last two years to offer graduate degrees (once only a distant dream) in Church Music and Education . Once we had only a handful of athletic teams, now we have a full and still-expanding program of sports to attract talented athletes to our campus. Once, we were struggling to be a small, Christian college and now we have grown up into one of the best small Christian universities around. And a university is what we now officially are, as the long standing debate over the switch to university status was finally settled in 1997. In fact, no image may have underscored the change to university status more than the sight of the first participants of the school's first graduate program walking at Commencement in May 1996, while Master's programs. in education, liberal arts, and biblical studies were being developed.

Yet, it is neither the size of the student body, the number of dormitories on campus, the number of square blocks that we physically occupy in Cleveland, or the number of graduate programs that we offer that makes Lee a university. It is neither the physical beauty of the campus, the well-orchestrated fund raising, or our young, eloquent president that have make Lee a university for the thousands of young men and women who seek an education here each year. Rather, it is the spirit of Lee, symbolized by the flame, which underscores every purpose for our being. It is, first and most importantly, the Spirit of God who guides and directs this institution, which is so appropriately called, "A Campus Where Christ Is King." It is the spirit of knowledge and the light of knowledge which dispels the darkness of ignorance. It is the spirit of love, communicated to us through the supreme example of our Lord and Savior, which is daily tested and shaped in us by our professors, mentors, and colleagues. It is the spirit of family that binds us together in times of trial and tribulation. It is the spirit of the flame that we celebrate.

As the editors and staff of the 1997 Vindagua, we invite you, the reader, to join us in this celebration of the past year and the first fifty years of the Lee College experience. As we compose our individual pages in the unfolding saga that is Lee College, let us never forget that each of us take a bit of Lee with us wherever we go, and that our time here is what we make of it. May the flame burn brightly in our hearts forever.

Olympics At Lee

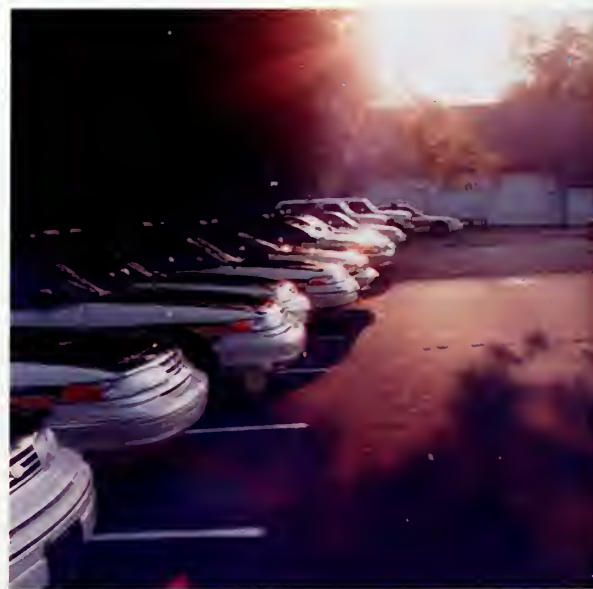

Lee College moves and shakes the world in many ways, but her accomplishments usually are not noticed by the world in general. This was not so during the summer of 1996, for the name of Lee College traveled to the far reaches of the earth as the site of the Olympic Village for those involved in the whitewater competition on the Ocoee River. Long before Olympic athletes arrived on the campus on June 22nd, Dr. Paul Conn, Dr. David Tilley, and the rest of the faculty and staff were working hard to ensure that the school would live up to her reputation as a world-class organization. So much planning and preparation went into making sure that the dorms, dining hall, and other facilities and services were ready that for some it may have seemed at times to be the impossible dream. The students also made their contributions to the success of this mission. While the dining hall was being renovated, they willingly ate in a makeshift facility for several months. Many served as volunteers on the Olympic staff, and some donned the uniform of security guard to offer a greater sense of safety to our guests. Yes, it took a lot of work and sacrifice, but in the end it was all worth the effort. The athletes returned to their homes with a special place in their hearts for their home away from home. In addition, the people of the Ocoee region were once again reminded of the value of having Lee College as a part of the community. When it all came to an end on August 4th, Lee College had truly shown the world that no challenge is too great for people who believe that we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us.

For those who were on the campus of Lee College on September 12 and 13, 1996, it was readily apparent that something BIG was taking place. It started with a gathering of alumni from all over the United States descending upon the campus to take part in the opening festivities on Thursday and culminated with an inspiring message from President Paul Conn in a special Friday morning chapel service. The celebration was held in order to recognize many physical improvements which have been made on the campus through the "Open Door" campaign. The highlight of this event was the chapel service. The Festival Chorus, under the direction of Dr. Lonnie McCalister, provided the audience with some of the most beautiful songs of worship to be heard anywhere in the world. Dr. Carolyn Dirkson presented a delightful overview of the changes that she has observed at Lee during the past 28 years. President Conn then opened his heart to share the vision that God has given him for the future of the institution. The question he posed was the one which was on many people's minds. Will Lee become a university, or will the dream die because we fail to try. Dr. Conn believes that if Lee College is to continue to grow and affect young people who will in turn touch the world, then each person who cares must invest his or her life to make it happen!

This past fall the Lee campus, like many college campuses across the nation, was actively caught up in the frenzy of national presidential politics. On Wednesday, October 23, the 1996 race for the White House came to the "campus where Christ is King" in a grand, and unexpected way, when Republican Vice-Presidential nominee and former U.S. congressman (and N.F.L. star) Jack Kemp visited Lee for a GOP rally and speech in Alumni Park on a beautiful Southeastern Tennessee autumn afternoon.

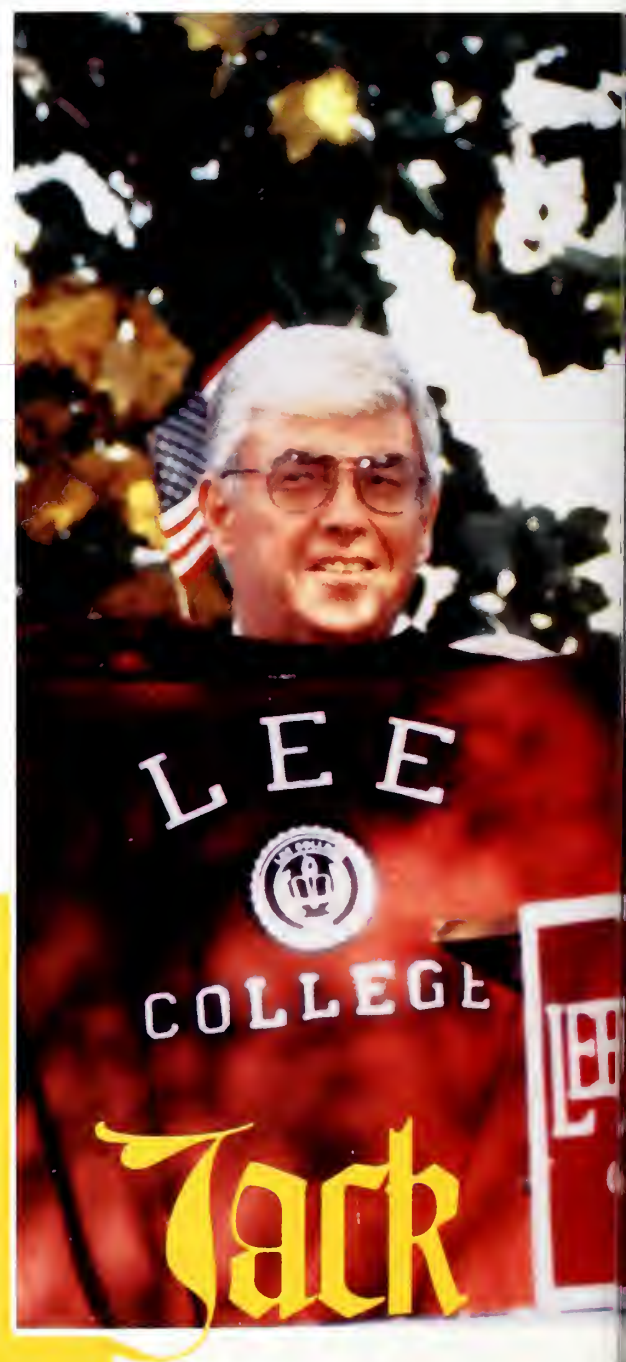

As part of "The Touch-down Express Campaign Stop in Tennessee," this rally, which also featured such national Republican figures as first district U.S. congressman Zach Wamp, former Tennessee governor and presidential hopeful Lamar Alexander, and current Tennessee governor Don Sundquist, was the third of four stops in the state for Kemp on a day of marathon campaigning in the waning days of the '96 campaign.

Many Lee College musical groups performed a program of patriotic music to the cheers of the sizable crowd. County music star Lee Greenwood added to the patriotic frenzy with a version of his signature song, "God Bless the U.S.A."

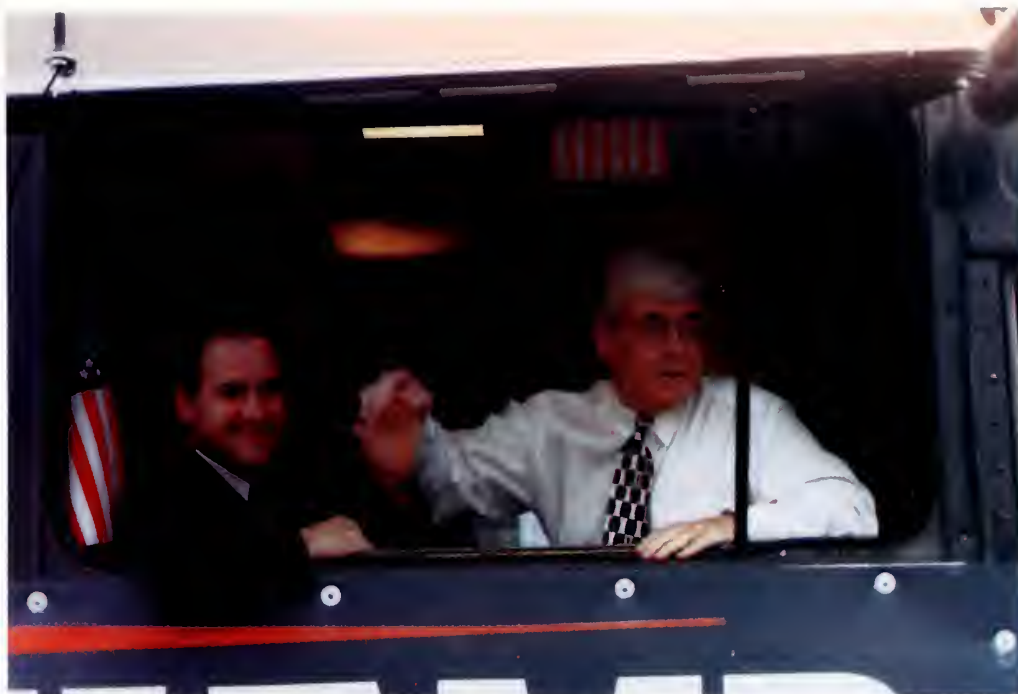

The Kemp visit was a once-in-a-lifetime event which thrust Lee College, if only for a few fleeting moments, into the national political spotlight.

PROGRAM FOR DETAILS AND LOCATIONS

Homecoming at Lee College is traditionally a time of celebration and reunion, and Homecoming 1996 offered an extended time of memories and a renewal of old friendships for all who were involved.

Highlights from Homecoming '96 included the Flames basketball victory over Bryan College, the crowning of a new Homecoming queen, a ribbon cutting ceremony for the dedication of the Lee's newest buildings, a music festival, and the annual reunions for several choirs and Greek clubs.

Abigail Holt, a member of Sigma Nu Sigma, was named Lee College's 1996 Homecoming Queen, while Sigma, along with Ladies of Lee respectfully celebrated their thirtieth anniversaries. Also celebrating a milestone anniversary was the Evangelistic Singers, who celebrated their twenty-fifth year as a choir at Lee with a banquet at the North Cleveland Church of God.

Homecoming '96 was also a time to thank God for the newest additions and renovations to the Lee campus. In a ribbon cutting ceremony, Dr. Conn dedicated the new Deacon Jones Dining Hall, a welcome and long overdue renovation/building project that will better serve the college's ever-growing student body, and the new, and yet unnamed, Men's Apartment residence located on the corner of Fifteenth and Parker Streets across from Atkins-Ellis Hall.

Dr. Conn welcomed the visiting alumni back their alma mater and encouraged them to make a donation in support of the move to Lee University.

Perhaps the crowning moment of Homecoming '96 was the annual music festival, which featured an array of musical and vocal talent that included many of the school's choirs and performing ensembles. This two-day extravaganza featured a performance by the Ladies of Lee in which the Spirit of God moved mightily in both words and music.

It has been said that "home is where the heart is," and with progress on all fronts and thanksgiving being the order of the day on the Campus Where Christ Is King, Lee College was a great place to "come home to" in 1997.

We are at the threshold of a new beginning for Lee. Entrance into this new world was encouraged at Lee Day as people were welcomed to Lee University by the entire student body. The theme was carried out by connecting the new university status with Star Wars.

Each year Lee gives high school students an opportunity to visit our campus, talk with professors, and attend various special events held just for them. This year there were over 2,000 students and parents here to participate in the two-day affair we call Lee Day.

April 11-12 brought an enormous amount of activity to the campus both before, after, and during the time the visiting students were here. Many long hours were put into preparing this awesome undertaking.

Friday's activities started in the afternoon with registration and a few sporting events before the Block Party. This was a big party with lots of food and fellowship. Current students mingled with prospective students and shared their personal experiences at Lee. Special appearances were made by some of the Star Wars gang who captured contestants to go on stage to compete for prizes. After this was over, the Showcase 97 offered visitors a choice among Fiddler on the Roof, the Comedy House, 3 on 3 basketball, and the Music Festival. Each of these events provided a different twist for different tastes. The evening concluded with the youth leaders' "Home Run Hitting Contest."

The Saturday morning schedule began early with campus tours and opportunities to peruse the campus and check out the booths that stretched all the way down the ped mall. The day included a few luncheons and meetings for the parents and prospective students. But the best of all was Life at Lee, presented by the students as a humorous outlook on the life here. All in all it turned out to be a very successful weekend that will attract many students in the years to come.

Summer Honors Olympic Games

The theme was that of Olympic Games to coincide with the Olympic Venue on the Ocoee and the athletes staying on campus in the Olympic Village. Summer Honors was two weeks of intensive studying and playing.

Games such as football and basketball were played in the DeVos Recreation Center for the Opening Ceremonies on the first night. Then participants were enlightened through eight different courses giving a total of six credit hours towards college. The topics of study ranged from Humor With A Bite: Satire in Literature and Film to Making Friends in the New Testament.

Different recreational trips were made at night to Dollywood and the IMAX for an educational experience and lots of fun. They participants learned the taste of college with their dining experience in the cafeteria and dined out at the Station House and Subway.

True Olympians know from whence their strength comes. Along with the study, games, and fun, Summer Honors also includes times for devotion and worship. Dr. Conn challenged them at Chillhowee, while Voices of Lee led in praise.

...from late night 100-meter sprints down the hallway to the Olympic height of the guy's shower heads... all left memories to cherish.

Doing all the fun stuff, the Freshman Honors Corps

The Lee College Freshman Honors Corps took an interesting approach to learning in their year-long study of the humanities. Comprised of three professors and eighteen students (10 in the Spring), the small class atmosphere encouraged learning and provided much personal attention. The students integrated art, music, history of western civilization and world literature in their studies of the diverse cultures of their world and their contributions to society. The application of how this knowledge influences the modern world prepares students for scholarly Christian living.

The students also spent time together out of the classroom doing the "fun stuff." School sponsored trips in the first semester included Atlanta's High Museum of Art's Olympic Ring Exhibit, a cook-out at the Dirksens', a visit to the University of the South at Sewanee, a tour of an orthodox Jewish synagogue, and a mythology story-time at the Nashville Parthenon. The second semester held an overnight stay at the Alabama Shakespeare Festival (students attended Macbeth and Loves's Labor's Lost), a tour of the Montgomery Museum of Art, and a trip to the Biltmore Estate and Gardens in Asheville, North Carolina. Numerous reading assignments and Dr. Hoffman's infamous "quests" resulted in many Jolt Cola-Study sessions and impromptu gatherings on and off campus as well.

Although the class carried a hefty workload and met daily, the students made lasting friendships, enjoyed lectures from "nutty professors" and received a weighted G.P.A. The Freshman Honors Corps experience will not soon be forgotten.

When someone mentions registration what do you think of? Here registration means getting up at the crack of dawn to wait hours upon hours in endless lines while trying to find the next station in the Walker Memorial building.

We go through all of this just so Lee College can get everyone in the system and ready for that first day of class. There is, however, one positive attribute to this chaos. While waiting in these long lines, it is a great time to get acquainted with the students around you. You never know what relationships could develop out of standing in line for registration.

We rocked the BLOCK....

The Upsilon Block Party gave students the opportunity to make new friends and keep the old. This year, with the stage set, music blaring, and an overflow of people, there was a fresh excitement felt by all. The lingering clouds were disregarded as everyone mingled and enjoyed the festivities. Upsilon got the crowd to their feet with various games and activities. One event was the popular "macarena." The first few beats of the song sent many towards the stage to join in with others already caught in the groove. Soon the thunder became so loud it began to frighten even the Upsilon men. A quick apology was given and a moment later, the sound equipment was torn down and moved out. Yet even bad weather could not put an end to the evening; it only added to the electricity in the air. Most stayed on, enjoying each other's fellowship well into the evening.

Their Mission. . . Which they chose to accept was to inform the freshman class about the many clubs and organizations on the Lee College campus. Their theme was "Mission Impossible."

It seemed as though SGA's mission was an impossible one. Having to inform the student body of the numerous social service clubs and spiritual life clubs was no easy task. But Tanner McFall, Angie Garland, and Jonathan Rush, with the assistance of their SGA partners, accepted the job without hesitation.

Virtually every fraternity, sorority and spiritual life club entertained the crowd with a skit. Alpha Gamma Chi's recipe for a "Chi Shake" set the crowd on end when everyone started looking for some Alka-Seltzer to settle their stomachs. Sigma Nu Sigma had the audience in stitches with their portrayal of the Saturday Night Live "Ultimate Cheerleaders." The evening also had some serious aspects as Youth Leaders

Association performed a skit entitled "What Did You Do about It?"

The entire event was entertainment at its best. It made everyone wonder what SGA could possibly do the next year to top this year's Festaganza? Oh, and by the way. . . MIS- SION ACCOMPLISHED.

The school year began with many different events to welcome the returning and incoming students. Among these events was the first traditional skating party, on August 28, 1996, sponsored by Alpha Gamma Chi. Many people came out to Roller Coaster Skate

World to fellowship with other Lee College students. The party certainly eased the agony of classes beginning the next day. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, whether skating elbow to elbow, playing games, or just socializing. A new addition to the Lee College student body, Mary Strand said, "After running into the walls all night, I finally mastered the art of stopping!" Other students agreed with freshman class president Kerri Simmons said, "I really enjoyed the skating party because it gave me a casual and relaxed atmosphere to meet new people." Students say that this was one of the biggest turnouts Chi has had. In order to keep on the Chi skating party tradition, Lee may want to consider adding yet another building to the growing campus -- a skating rink.

On Friday, August 30, the Lee College Greek clubs came out onto the pedestrian mall to "tap" selected students. Many students were honored with a tap that night, but this was only the beginning for them.

According to Theta Delta Kappa inductee Eric Winstead, "I had no idea that I would be tapped. It was so unbelievable. It was also very exciting to see some of my friends get tapped." Alpha Gamma Chi member, Brad Blackmon, said, "The night was so exciting because I was tapped to be a gentleman for Delta Zeta Tau. It was such an honor."

The night was not only exciting for those who were tapped. The Greek club members also share the sentiments of those students chosen for clubs. "It was neat for me to experience the flip-side of tap night as a Sigma Nu Sigma sister" said Ashley Freer.

Competition is very intense among students at Lee, especially as the attendance increases. The raft race always presents a perfect culmination of spirit and pure muscle.

Thirty-one boats entered the race down the Hiwassee. "This annual event is sponsored by the student government Association at Lee. Fraternities, sororities, and service organizations participated with all money raised going to a local charity" (Bradley News Weekly, Oct., 19-25)

The race started early Saturday morning, October 12, four to five miles from the finish line. Each boat set off separately to be timed for the fastest trip down the river, but only one boat crossed the line first. Pi Kappa Pi made a grand entry. It was a very close race with Delta Zeta Tau in for second place. All the rafters enjoyed themselves that day. Not everyone went down the river in such a hurry; some just basked in the sunshine. Others anxiously awaited the jump from the tressle.

OKTOBERFEST

Dr. Conn with remarkable endurance holds nothing back in his defeat over Hoyt Knox

Every year the men of Pi Kappa Pi host their version of the popular Oktoberfest. And every year it seems to get bigger and better. According to Mark Shepherd, "We have made sure that this year's Oktoberfest will be better than ever." A greased pig was chased by many and caught by few; the champions came out to defend their record funneling cider; and arm wrestling and tons of food provided hours of entertainment for the hundreds of Lee students in attendance. Students filled Alumni Park to see the arm wrestling battle of the year, Dr.

Paul Conn vs. Hoyt Knox. While many other arm wrestling battles were fought, Dr. Conn's match was by far the most watched. Most students saw no way for Dr. Conn to win, but in the end the underdog was the victor. As the evening came to a close, students were left with new memories. These memories, created by the men of Pi Kappa Pi, will forever burn in the minds of students as more than just another night. It was bigger and better than ever.

All the rednecks came out of the woods. It was kinda scary....

When rednecks get together they really know how to have fun! For one night, on October 22, the lovely ladies of Delta Zeta Tau were transformed into rednecks. In their opening skit they showed us what they do for fun and performed like true rednecks.

Along with several skits and songs, there were many games to play. Spitting watermelon seeds was a favorite activity that allowed new champions "a claim to fame." Many took their aim with a wet sponge at their friends and family (rednecks don't know the difference anyway). And for many girls, the best part was the Married till Midnight booth.

Those good ole DZT girls even had an old-fashioned recycling pile on the ground. When it was all said and done, those rednecks put on another awesome shindig!

By the time September 26 came along, many of the students at Lee were ready for a break. Alpha Gamma Chi once again provided an opportunity to escape from the exciting life of Cleveland to a venture down the river in Chattanooga. One hundred couples decided to take advantage of this annual occasion and attended the Chi Cruise. Unseasonably warm weather provided a perfect backdrop for a romantic evening on the Southern Belle as she cruised down the Tennessee River. Each girl donned her favorite dress and, escorted by her date, embarked on an evening of adventure.

The Voices of Lee band added to the atmosphere of the evening by providing background music for the guests while they enjoyed a delicious buffet.

After dinner, the couples drifted off to the upper deck to enjoy the beautiful night. This became quite an opportunity to socialize; and, as conversations sparked throughout the upper

The girls asked the boys, then the girls chased the boys, and if they caught them, the boys had to pay.

Keeping with tradition, the men of Upsilon Xi held their annual Sadie Hawkins bonfire at Dr. O'Bannon's farm on Saturday, November 2, 1996.

Students began Sadies even a day earlier on Friday with the "Chase" held in Alumni Park. Women went after their dates, attempting to get the dolls by running after them and even getting a little dirty. This included using flour, corn syrup and anything that they could get their hands on.

A Saturday night of starry skies, cold weather, and a warm fire set the stage for another classic night on the farm. There were many activities offered at Sadies that night. You could sit by your date around the fire and talk to your friends. For music lovers, Sadies brought a variety of sound to the stage. The acts varied from rapping to singing songs of John Cougar Mellancamp. Finally, if it was laughter you needed, Upsilon even provided a skit or two to make you smile.

Another great night of fire and moonlight passed as people strolled away with memories that would surely not be soon forgotten.

The mystery of the Masquerade was felt by those students who ventured onto the pedestrian mall. Stringed lights, balloons, and streamers added to the ambiance of the evening. The smell of hot chocolate, coffee, and other treats drifted past the noses of all who attended. To make the evening complete, many in attendance were decked out in magnificent costumes. People meandered around, checking out the different costumes and socializing with one another. At the end of the evening, the best costume award was given, hands down, to "The Upside Down Man." With the wave of a wand, the magic disappeared into the still night, not soon to be forgotten.

It is Christmas time again and the men and ladies of Pi Kappa Pi brought us their early Christmas celebration. Since most students always go our separate ways for the holidays, this annual event provides us an opportunity to spread holiday cheer to our college friends and family. There are always lights and tinsel, and this year there was a special visit from Santa Claus. Those Pi guys really must have had connections to get him to come all the way from the North Pole to the Lee College campus.

The new graduates: Chris Klicko and Melodia Torres

December Graduation

A fairly recent tradition at Lee, December graduation saw an increase this year, with ninety students choosing this option. The decorations for the holiday season provided a colorful backdrop for the festive occasion.

The Lee Singers offered musical selections for the commissioning service on December 13, with renditions of "How Excellent Is Thy Name" and "This Could Be the Day." Following a charge to the graduates by Dr. Paul Conn, Jason Hopkins, Lisa Olsen, Kevin Moses, Rachel Jackson, Chris Klicko, and Melodia Torres offered reminiscences of their years at Lee.

The Saturday morning commencement ceremony began with the processional at 10:30 A.M., followed by Ladies of Lee, singing "Lord of All" and "O Holy Night." In his address, "A Joker in the Storehouse," Dr. Charles Conn challenged the graduates not to be conformed to a world in which values are often contrary to God's Word.

Love Stinks

Lady and the Tramp share spaghetti

Do you really hate it when everyone you know gets flowers, candy, and cards on February 14? If so, then the lovely ladies in red had the party for you. Delta Zeta Tau's annual Valentine's Bash, held this year on the 13th, had a little twist. The theme "Love Stinks" set the mood for an evening of food, fellowship, and lots and lots of laughs! Spoofs of Grease and Top Gun ended in break-ups. Lady and the Tramp choked on their spaghetti, and Romeo experienced mild intestinal distress to turn Juliet totally off. Dawn Schuck and Derrick Sharp hosted the evening, showing the stages many couples go through... and who could forget the Holly Gentlemen's skit when Jeff Laughlin turned into Emil Brown. DZT reminded everyone that Valentines is not always what it's "cracked" up to be. Love Stinks!!!

The distinguished men of Theta Delta Kappa, on the night of April 14th, were proud to present their 10th annual "Evening at the Cotton Club." The title alone depicts an era of American history that is classified by great music and dance.

The event was held in the Crystal Ballroom of the historic Raddison Read House in downtown Chattanooga. A night of wonderful jazz music, fine dining, great singing, and a performance of an original "swing" routine made this evening a classic success.

The men in navy and grey did a wonderful job of creating a lovely night of class, entertainment, and memories. The "Cotton Club," after only five years, is definitely on its way to becoming a favorite Lee College tradition.

New Dorm War records were set on February 25, 1997. For the first time in Dorm War history, there was a tie between two first-place teams, Men's Apartments and Medlin Hall.

After a fast and furious blanket race, Medlin jumped from third place to first. To solve the tie, the resident directors Brad Griggs of Medlin and Dave Edwards of Men's Apartments ran through an intense obstacle course with fireman boots on their feet. The crowd shouted and cheered each team on. In the end Dave Edwards and the Men's Apartments took home the trophy.

Dave Edwards said, "We were all real confident in our team and we did everything we knew to take home the trophy."

He added that he was quite nervous at the beginning of the obstacle race because "I had the whole dorm resting on my shoulders."

In the end, Atkins-Ellis came away in third place, Medlin in second and the Men's Apartments took first.

On the women's side, Livingston Hall has won Dorm Wars for two years in a row. Alex Bush, captain for Livingston, said, "We practiced a couple of times during competition and between the whole team we had great communication, teamwork, and athletes." "We pushed for first place the whole time," said Bush.

Trying to win back-to-back titles, the Livingston Ladies felt the pressure. "We took last year's knowledge and tried to use the quickest methods in order to stay really focused. It was a very competitive atmosphere and it was a lot of fun getting together with friends and meeting new people," said Bush.

The women's third-place title went to Simmons Hall and second place was captured by Tharp Hall.

As Time Goes By

Merica Patton, an English major and member of Delta Zeta Tau from Atlanta, was crowned Miss Parade of Favorites 1997 on March 15. In representing DZT in the thirty-fifth and final P.O.F pageant in the history of Lee "College," Merica competed for the honor with twelve other ladies from various campus organizations and was judged in the areas of talent, evening gown, formal interview, academics/ extracurricular activities and video presentation, in a program that showcased the performance abilities of the contestants. For the talent portion of the competition, she performed a lyrical ballet to Cindy Morgan's "How Could I Ask for Paige Smith and Wes Finchum grooving with the 70's for Ladies of Lee.

More." Other performers included talent award winner Stefanie Oppenheimer, who performed a dramatic monologue from the film Steel Magnolias. Other displays of talent included a flag/ interpretive dance number by Stacey Beavers and song from Andrew Lloyd Webber's Phantom of the Opera by Jaimee Hodges.

The theme of P.O.F. 1997, "As Time Goes By," was played out in the pageant's opening number--a bit which split the contestants into several decades and which placed them into the appropriate clothing of the particular time. According to choreographer Kerri Simmons, "the opening number put an emphasis on each girl as an individual. I wanted it to be fun for them--something they didn't have to think about."

The opening was followed by the talent and evening gown sections of the program and was helped along throughout by Dr. Matthew Melton and Mrs. Carolyn Williams, Master and Mistress of Ceremonies.

In addition to these elements of the competition, each contestant was responsible for making a video tape of her campus involvements and activities. This was shown to the audience during the evening gown walk.

Although P.O.F. was not Merica's first pageant, she said that it was definitely the most fun. "There are so many people I see on campus that I don't know. I actually got to meet [the ladies] and see who they really are," she said. "It's a real bonding experience." When asked how she felt upon winning the crown, Merica said, "I'm still in shock...I was so honored that DZT chose me. My main goal was to represent them well."

Other winners of P.O.F. 1997 included first runner-up and SGA representative Andrea Antwine, Upsilon Xi's Kelley Byrd as second runner-up, Omega Delta Phi's Kristin Crawford as Ms. Congeniality, and Evan Albertyn, who received the escort award.

We had a blast at the Pi Bash

Once again the Devos Recreation Center was graced with the presence of $\pi\kappa\pi$. The Saint Patty's Day Bash was just that, a bash!

Many people showed up to play games such as twister and volleyball but only after they first stuffed their faces with pepperoni pizza and soda. Nothing attracts Lee College students the way free food and good company does--not to mention fun and games -- and Pi provided just that.

When asked why they celebrated Saint Patty's Day Ken Lane responded

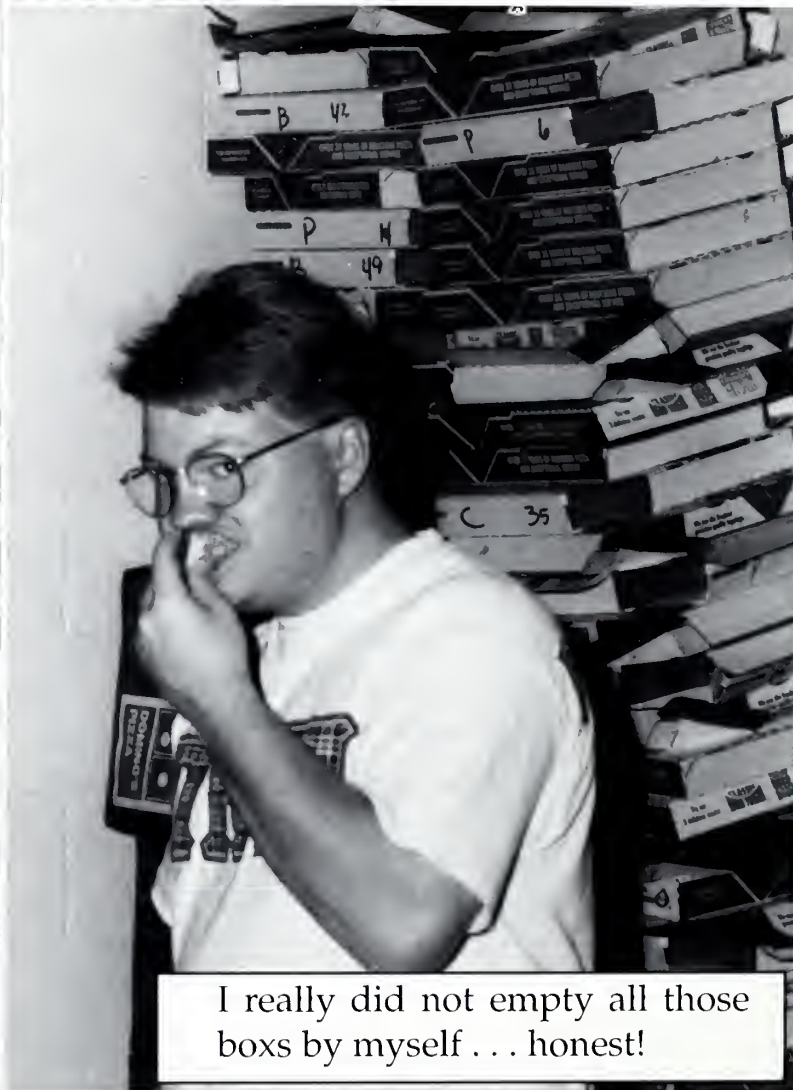

"Honestly it's not because it is a great holiday to get people together on campus to fellowship but it is because it is the only day out of the year world-wide that people make a conscious effort to wear our color!"

Pi Kappa P has added a new flavor to Saint Patty's Day, and we will all be looking forward to next year.

and friends to Cleveland for the May 9th and 10th weekend, which consisted of the traditional Friday night Commissioning Service and the official conferral of degrees on Saturday morning. The festivities, held against the backdrop of perfect, clear and cool spring weather, began with the pageantry and reverence of commissioning. In the words of Dr. Conn, Commissioning was indeed a time to "sit back and listen to the students" as six members of the graduating class shared their individual Lee experience with short (sometimes comical, sometimes emotional, sometimes dyadic, but wholly entertaining) speeches. Special recognition of the graduates receiving the institution's three top honors was also a proud and moving aspect of the service. Dr. Conn recognized Matthew Mondy, winner of the Zeno C. Tharp Award; Bonnie Eckert, winner of the F.J. Lee Award; and, Monica Alderman, winner of the Charles Paul Conn Award.

era of Lee as a small, comprehensive university. Dr. Walker also presented Dr. Conn with the official gold seal of Lee University, replacing the silver seal of the former Lee College.

Commencement 1997 was further made memorable by the moving address given by Rev. Billy Zeoli. To paraphrase Forrest Gump, commencement speakers are often "like a box of chocolates" in the sense that one never really knows what one is going to get in terms of length, originality, or likability. Yet Rev. Zeoli shared a message that was poignant, original, and entertaining. Rev. Zeoli convincingly pointed out to the graduates that God has a plan and purpose for each individual life. In quoting from a famous commencement speech by Sir Winston Churchill, Zeoli also exhorted the graduates to "Never give up." With uncertainties and fear momentarily put aside, the class of 1997 walked away from Commencement with more than their degrees; they walked away with hope and the sense of purpose that comes only when one knows that he is walking with God.

College and university commencements are traditionally a time of great emotion, delirious joy, and well-deserved relief. Yet commencement is also a time of anxiety and, yes, even angst for many students as they begin the first day of the rest of their lives. While celebrating the completion of one brief (and well-guided) journey, the graduate begins another journey (one inevitable and certainly less certain) by facing a nagging question, pondered by all baccalaureates since the dawn of university education: "Now that I've finished my degree, what's next?"

"What's next?" was certainly a valid question for the graduating class of 1997, but the swan song seventy-seventh commencement of Lee College was a time when "what's next?" became less a question loaded with fear and apprehension and more a challenge and charge to pursue personal excellence with a divine sense of individual purpose.

Commencement weekend 1997 began with the migration of a few thousand family members

In addition to the usual pomp and circumstance that accompanies graduation, Commencement 1997 was marked by two particularly outstanding moments: the official end of Lee College and the birth of Lee University and the speech of Billy Zeoli. Dr. Paul Walker, General Overseer of the Church of God, the college's sponsoring denomination, read an official pronouncement which effectively ended Lee's fifty years as a liberal arts college and began the

The Friday Night Live Series targets the empty weekend nights on the school calendar in order to provide social events for the campus. The Office of Student Events, under the leadership of Phil Cook, and different individual clubs sponsor these events throughout the school year. The "Administration vs. Students All-Star Softball Game," "1970's Movie Night," "Battle of the Bands," "Board Game Night," "1980's Movie Night," and "Renaissance

The Crucible

"God is Dead"

In November Stephen Nichols led an all-star cast of Lee College thespians in Arthur Miller's controversial and thought-provoking drama, The Crucible.

The Crucible is a dramatic play full of characters caught in moral dilemmas. The theme challenges the audience to consider the historic events of the seventeenth-century Salem witch trials.

John Proctor, played by Nichols, is a common farmer caught in a personal struggle as a man unable to accept forgiveness. "I am no saint, as the others," he claims. Nichols' character is plagued with human frailties that audience members will be certain to see in their own lives.

On the surface the play is a dramatization of historic events. However, the real trial places the human frailties of greed, vengeance, lust, fear, and hysteria on trial in such a fashion as to compel us to examine those frailties in ourselves.

The cast included Gerry Anderson, Brooke Bailey, Aimee Born, James Havener, Jan Clackum, Daniel Couch, Jennings Dillard, Elizabeth Graham, Dawn Holt, Scott Hunter, Adam Maachi, Joseph Martinez, Stephenie Oppenheimer, Jessica Usherwood, Elizabeth Vandergraph, and Amanda Wolfe.

Jim Veenstra was the director of the show while Philip Price and Beverly Dailey handled the combined job of assistant directors. Dawn Adkins was the show's costumer.

Nichols, a freshman at Lee College, said the role of Proctor was a challenge for him. "I hope that people will see the despair of the human condition," Nichols said. "I hope they see the potential good in everyone."

The play was very intense and required very precise concentration to portray the exact intentions of Miller. When Nichols' character proclaims, "God is dead," Nichols hoped the audience would understand. "We're not actually saying God is dead," he explained. "It's really in a metaphorical sense." Nichols said the story is "brilliantly written by Miller. No matter what you believe, there is a tug between right and wrong."

"We're not actually saying God is dead. It's really in a metaphorical sense," said Nichols.

"I hope that people will see the despair of the human condition," Nichols said.

TRAVELING LIGHT

What do you get when you combine 40 characters, four actors, 70+ scenes, 15 accents, and the Book of Mark? It's an experience like you have never had before. There are ways of seeing how Jesus related to the people of this Earth, and one of them is through a magnificently written play called Traveling Light.

Directed by Sharon Carbaugh and Assistant Director Jeremy Yoder, the play was approached with tireless energy and persistence from everyone involved. The cast was quite compact. Actors Rob Alderman, Brandon Hyde, Rosemary Rutland, and Chyela Stewart were responsible for portraying all 40 of the characters, each with a different accent. If you think this sounds challenging, just ask one of the many crew members who helped make it all happen. The set was simple but for each performance it was necessary to have the multi-talented Teresa Sapp to orchestrate scene changes, light cues, and the overall management of all stage activities. The set was designed and constructed by Steven McGuffey with shop assistants Larry Watters, Angie Hartzler, and Phillip Price who helped not only with building but with scene changes.

Traveling Light was the first production at Lee College to make use of the entire fly system capabilities in the theatre. The set was simple but each scene was made unique by bringing in decorated backdrops that helped tell the story. The creative abilities of the lighting and sound engineers were put to the test. Jonathan Wills mastered the lights while Howard Riley maintained ear-pleasing levels for each and every wacky voice the actors were able to come up with. Sallie Ard, a professional and most admired Props Manager, collected and maintained a large number of necessary props used for each of the 70+ completely different scenes. Although the cast was small, Costume Designer Dawn Adkins may have felt at times like she was costuming Gone With the Wind. Each actor played ten characters. Rob Alderman had so many quick scene changes he had to have his own personal assistant for costume changes. Dusty Strickland was a master at transforming Judas Iscariot (a gang member) into Doubting Thomas, the far out surfer dude.

Traveling Light is a very innovative creation. The Gospel of Mark, the story of Jesus, is told through the eyes of the people who were with Jesus and sometimes even Jesus himself. We all worked hard to create the show and through it all we laughed at Thomas, were angry at Judas, understood the Widow, cried with Mary, and wanted to be like Jesus. --- Unto All the World.

What Time

The Lee College theater presented What Time I am Afraid during the month of February. The play, an original work by Glen Procopio from North Cleveland Church Of God, was edited and directed by Dr. Sharon Carbaugh for the Lee performance. The two-hour play had a cast of 24 characters.

What Time I am Afraid deals with the persecution of the Jews, their faith in God and the struggles of the Holocaust.

According to Carbaugh, the play was completely different from the others she had directed in the past. "I think it's a more serious and challenging play," said Carbaugh. "With this kind of setting, there aren't exactly a whole lot of light-hearted moments, but a lot of tense moments."

Carbaugh hopes the play's material will both enlighten and provoke the audience. "I hope this play will get people to think and realize that the atrocities and horrible things we have done to each other in the past don't need to be repeated in the future," she said.

Thus far, the play seems to have accomplished these goals. "Saturday (Feb 22) was really great," said senior Sallie Ard, who played Hannah "The people were cheering and continued having a great time after the play was over."

I am Afraid

Assistant director Rob Alderman felt the actors were measuring up to the challenge. "Some of these people have never really been on stage before, but they've really stepped up and done a terrific job."

The theme of What Time is that no matter what one is going through, one can always trust in God. "I feel that people who believe in God need to realize that God didn't guarantee that everything is going to go well. There are going to be troubles, but in those troubles we still have to trust him even if things don't go the way we want them to," said Dr. Carbaugh. "What is significant is trusting God, no matter what," she added.

Fiddler on the Experience

firsthand perspective of the Fiddler.

The play Fiddler on the Roof encompasses many thought-provoking and emotional themes. It is the Fiddler who ties in the themes of Jewish perseverance under the yoke of persecution and the deep-rooted traditions and cultural heritage that make the Jews a distinctive group.

From the outset of the dialogue, we learn that Tevye, a dairyman who has been "blessed with five daughters and a life of poverty" has an intimate relationship with the mysterious character on the roof. In his first appearances Tevye explains that the Jews are like the Fiddler, "trying to keep [their] balance and scratch out a simple tune." In this way, the precarious position he plays parallels the delicate balance of harsh governments and anti-semitic movements and simple life.

In later scenes the Fiddler takes his risks by coming down from the roof to try to help his comrades in their times of need. On numerous occasions, the Fiddler comforts Tevye as he learns about the inevitable pogrom in the village. The Fiddler also tries to "make a match" between Perchick and Hodel by playing the music from Kiev to accompany their dancing. He is also there when Tevye asks the poignant question of his wife, "Do you love me?"

In the most emotional scene of the play, the Fiddler tries to prevent Chava from violating Jewish tradition by marrying a Gentile. As the fiddler plays to her, Chava is distracted by the goyim Fyedka and runs into his arms instead.

“... blessed with five daughters and a life of poverty,” said Tevye

The Fiddler on the Roof successfully balances laughter and emotional moments as the audience travails through the vicissitudes of the Jews' lives. One sparkling and yet touching addition to this setting is the Fiddler. Through humorous movements and “traditional” sentiments, he draws all ideas into one lively entity.

A temporary name change for Lee causes confusion among the students

My 9:00 a.m. class always seems to come too early, especially after late nights working on the yearbook. But a short walk to school from my apartment seems to wake me up enough that I am fully conscious for my class.

One particular morning, April 16, 1997, as I was on Church Street approaching the Vest Building, I noticed something very unusual. The "Lee College" sign read "Lee University." I wondered if I was dreaming or having a post-no-sleep morning mirage. I blinked, but it was still there. As I started wondering if anyone else noticed, I heard someone behind me remark about the sign. What a relief! I wasn't having delusions!

Around 5:00 p.m. as I was heading home, I turned to admire the sign bearing the school's new name. Much to my confusion, the sign once again read "Lee College."

I wondered who this Big Brother was and if he was enjoying toying with our fragile minds at such an early morning hour -- until I remembered seeing a photographer with Gary Ray, Director of Admissions, taking aerial shots of the school. As it turned out, the only reason for the sign switch was the photo op it provided.

The Great Outdoors

As the weather got warmer during this spring semester, more and more students could be found outdoors in their spare time. Some enjoyed rollerblading around campus or playing outdoor sports, while others could be found kicking back on the ped mall, watching the world go by. Whatever the case, the warm weather seemed to draw people out of their winter hibernation.

UNDER CONSTRUCTION

We were forced from our usual crowded eating experience in the dining hall into Walker Arena. First, we were subjected to a wall of change that we signed, signifying our approval. Then as the wall was to come down to make room for the addition, we were moved into the gym where we felt uninhibited in the large open area. We only dared to dream of how wonderful our new dining hall would be.

Students at Lee ham it up.

According to the Tahoe News. . .

When several students from Lee went on a ski trip, they were caught by the area paper and asked, "Have the rains affected snow conditions at Lake Tahoe?"

Travis Johnson, Miami: "The snow is incredible. I'm having a great time in Tahoe. There is a foot and a half of powder in the trees."

Erik Kemerling, Delaware: "The snow is great. We're skiing powder. It's awesome."

The bands also played at a club associated with the Baptist Association for Student Events at the University of Central Florida.

Adrian Fisher, the bass player for Little Brother commented on the trip: "As a band, we got really close in Christ... like brothers."

Even though the bands are different in style, they were welcomed and accepted by a wide variety of audiences.

By Melanie McWhorter

During Spring Break this year, the bands Little Brother and Junction 7 toured in Florida. The bands played four gigs, including a concert on the beach in Daytona at which forty people gave their lives to God. The bands were taken in by Calvary Assembly of God youth group, His Generation, in Orlando. They played twice more at the church.

As Daniel Lambert of Junction 7 said, "We stayed at some really hospitable people's houses.... They really knew how

The manager of Marriott, David Kratz, after being dunked.

The Marriott Picnic

Tony from Philly tries his hand at dunking the manager of Marriott.

In April, the Marriott treated students to a dinner outside. Students enjoyed lots of good food and had a chance to try their hand at dunking the manager of Marriott in the dunking booth. There were also games of volleyball and basketball being played nearby. The Christian music played over the loudspeakers also added to the festive atmosphere. Even after the students finished eating, many of them stuck around to socialize and enjoy the fun. The beautiful day was enjoyed by all who attended.

The Tyranny of VOICE MAIL

"8..0..1..5!" Come on, admit it..You know as well as I do that these four digits are by far the four most influential numbers on the Lee College campus. We all have them memorized. Typing them is almost automatic to all those itchy, little, message-hungry pointer fingers. We can and will, when forced, type them in the dark. I think it's safe to say that some people could even sing the touchtones. What is it about voice mail that has us so hooked?

Could it be the lovely monotone voice that so robotically answers every beck and call with "ready!"? Or maybe it's that we have, 24 long hours a day, the ability to tap into this super-technological web of mailbox numbers, security codes, and pound signs. Whatever the reason, the voice mail craze has swept through Lee College in a big way.

Let's face it, we've all gone through the ups and downs of mailbox watching. Some days we've gotten in from classes and found that God has blessed us with 4 or 5 new messages. (4! Praise God!) Unfortunately, though, as we continually press 5 to listen, 3 to erase, and 7 to save, we find that they are nothing special. How many times have you been crushed to learn that all you've gotten is another one of Phil Cook's crazy announcements? (Hey guys, sorry to bug you once again..") What about when the little orange light is blinking for no apparent reason other than to mock us? After all this bitter persecution, however, there are those truly special moments when there really is a jewel waiting for us to press the desired button and hear it.

The other neat thing is that we can have a really cool outgoing message. My own mailbox has seen a plethora of styles and methods. I have had DCTalk's Jesus Freak, myself talking backwards, and a suitemate barbershop quartet on my phone. I've heard some pretty strange ones as well.

The most ironic thing about the whole issue is that sometimes I'm happy to get my messages, but I don't want to take the time to actually sit and listen..(Some of my friends can get pretty long-winded.) It's like what Paul says in Romans 7:19, "For the good that I would I do not; but the evil that I would not, that I do." I want to reap the harvest, but I don't want to do the work. Well, I guess I've been hit by the voice mail fad as well when I start to apply theological principles to the whole thing. I guess I'd better go. I might have a message. by Chris Souza

one spectator's perspective

Students met to view the comet
from atop
Sharp-Davis

Change...One hundredth of a degree of change in the orbit of the earth will completely extinguish life's chemistry. When God created the universe, He had a specific design in mind, putting everything in a perfect place in perfect sync.

God seemed to like this region we call space, and there He created a firmament to separate the waters. He called this firmament Heaven and strung the stars throughout it.

It is here on earth that we find ourselves able to look up in the sky and see the beautiful heavens. The earth represents the largest amount of water except for the comets located in the OORT Cloud. These comets have higher elliptical orbits and contain most of the water ice in the solar system.

Hale Bopp represents only one of over a million comets beyond Pluto that inhabit the OORT Cloud. Comets are coated with water and are made of a heavy metal compound inside. As few as three to as many as twenty comets are discovered a year, but none has been as bright as this one. Its brightness is due in part to the amount of water ice blowing off its surface, giving the white color.

Compared to the earth's speed of 60,000 miles per hour around the sun, comets travel around 20,000 miles an hour. This means Hale-Bopp has made 2500 previous orbits over the last 2400 years. It should have appeared during the Pharonic Period in Egypt during the building of the pyramids. However, there is no record of it in any documentation that has been found to the present.

Tony from Philly...

Remember the first time you heard that?

Tony Connor from Philadelphia is graduating and leaving Lee College behind. It has been several years now since he took us on our first journey at Lee Day with his interviews with President Conn. Ever since that day he has continued to be a big part of the Lee family.

Hardly a single event went by this year at which you could not find his smiling face in attendance.

We congratulate you, Tony, on your graduation and wish you good luck and favor with God as you journey down the road.

Friends Erin McChesney, Aaron Beckendorf, Siddhi Ramji, and Patrick Shields "strike a pose" in front of Medlin Hall.

During the first half of Lee Day, as crowds were beginning to arrive on campus, a new band made one of their first performances. This band, the Waysearchers, opened for Typical Sloan as they played in the amphitheatre to entertain both guests and current students. The bands drew a crowd, and it was obvious by their music that they have been blessed with talent.

Adventure on....

"Excuse me, young man, but do you know who that gentleman is?" He pointed down to the lower deck. "No, Sir, I don't."

The man below said he was Charles Lindberg, the last living marine present when the first American flag was proudly flown in victory at Iwo Jima.

Teresa Browning and Sherwin Hamlett were taking pictures on the Chi cruise. Sherwin called down below and caught the eyes of a few non-Lee passengers on the deck who were having a veteran's dinner.

After learning Mr. Lindberg's true identity, they introduced themselves and got him to pose and give them his autograph.

"I was really honored to meet him, I felt like I met a part of history." -Teresa Browning

the Chi Cruise

"I've never experienced such an honor as I did the evening I shook the hand of Mr. Lindburg; it was beyond any doubt an honor I'll not soon forget."

WHO IS THAT BOY STEALING COOKIES??

IS IT GOAT BOY?

STUDENTS, ESPECIALLY OFF CAMPUS ONES AT LEE, WILL DO JUST ABOUT ANYTHING TO GET FREE FOOD.

RAMEN NOODLES AND MICROWAVE MEALS START TO GET OLD REALLY FAST, SO THE OCCASIONAL EXTRA HANDFUL OF FOOD AT AN EVENT WILL CARRY ON INTO THE NEXT MEAL.

APPARENTLY JAY CRITZ' WEAKNESS IS THOSE CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES.

Singled out

CAB and Omega Delta Phi made Valentine's an interesting day for eight singles on the Lee campus this year. The first-ever version of MTV's game show Singled Out was held, and it was a tremendous success for the sponsoring organizations. Two "lucky" girls and two "lucky" guys ended the evening in couple form as they answered questions on topics ranging from their height to their intelligence. The pool of 40 contestants was gradually narrowed down to just three by their responses to these questions.

The contestants then selected one of two answers to another set of questions in order to win an all-expense-paid date, furnished by CAB and $\Omega\Delta\Phi$. Hosted by the notorious Phil Cook, along with Greta Ellis and Anna Livingston, this game promises to be a highlight of every Valentine's Day on the Lee campus. Everyone will want to be a part in years to come...Don't be left "Singled Out."

Graduation Rehearsal

As the spring semester was drawing to a close, the seniors gathered in the Conn center for one of their last times together. The formality of graduation rehearsal and the exit exam may seem tedious, but it provided seniors with one of the last chances they had to be together as a whole.

Working For a Living

Working for a living—many Lee students take that line to heart. Many Cleveland restaurants, such as Applebee's, O'Charley's, The Spot, and Spankey's, benefited from having Lee College students as employees this past year.

For many students these jobs were about more than making spending money, they were about paying for college. A lot of sacrifice is made to support oneself and to still find an adequate amount of time for studying. Sometimes social lives have to be completely forgotten so as not to cause distractions.

Nonetheless, the majority of these working students learned to make the most of their jobs and maybe even enjoyed themselves in the process.

Selina Arnold, Charlinda Miller, Holly Richards , and Paige Smith at Applebee's in Cleveland.

"I was waiting on tables at O'Charley's one day after chapel and saw Dr. Mark Rutland and his daughter Rosemary. I retrieved my camera from the car and snapped this picture for the yearbook." Sheila Massengill

We all needed to take a study break, so we went to the all-night session at Fazoli's during final exams.

SPRING BREAK '97

"What I did on spring break".. Nikki Johnson

I spent my spring break helping out with a youth revival in Brandon, Florida, along with Jason Browning and Greg White. Greg preached, Jason sang, and I prayed. In between services, we went to the beach and ended up running into the Lee singers.

A Needed Break...

Sheila Massengill

The time between Christmas break and spring break is one of the longest periods of the whole school year, especially when it starts getting warm and everyone is more willing to skip classes and just hang out in the sunshine.

This spring break was a needed one for me and many others at Lee who needed to relax away from the stresses of the college life. I went with a friend, Wendy Palmer, a resident of Chattanooga, to visit my family (who happen to live in Florida). It was hot in Palm Beach where my sister and her family live, so we hit the beach, not unlike many others who went to Florida for their big spring break.

Spring Break Memory

Rhiannon Law

Spring break '97 brought many laughs, adventures, and good times as my friends and I headed to none other than the Sunshine State. Packed tight in the Cavalier with barely enough room to breathe, Jennifer, Amy, Sarah, Mary, and I were looking forward to the days that lay ahead. We spent a few days getting some R&R on the beach, a night at Church St. Station, but the best day was when we went to Universal Studios. They held a Mardi Gras Parade filled with clowns, floats, flame-throwers, and a whole array of costumes. We caught as many beads and coins as we could get our hands on! After a great week of fun in the sun, we packed our bags and headed home to finish out the rest of the year.

...In Israel

Spring Break is a great time to get away to rest and relax from school and to travel to vacation spots. This year, Spring Break would be different for 40 students and guests as they traveled to the Holy Land of Israel to spend their Spring Break as well as Easter Holiday.

Everyone's expectations were high as we ventured off to a land we have often dreamed of going to visit. We were a bunch of total strangers, but became a family in no time. The flight took almost a full 24 hour day to arrive in Tel Aviv. We were all tired, but excitement grew as we traveled through the city, to the Mediterranean Sea where we spent our first night.

We traveled throughout the whole country of Israel from North to South and East to West, covering some of the most Holy places on the face of the Earth. Our group had the experience of sailing and being Baptized in the Sea of Galilee, walking through the Via Delorosa, Bethlehem, Nazareth, and many other exciting places. The trip lasted a full 10 days, but the most thrilling moment for most people were our visits to the Birthplace of Christ, and our experience at the Garden Tomb at the sunrise service Easter Sunday. While at the birthplace we praised and worshipped in song, and devotion, the spirit seemed to fill our souls as we were there and standing in line at the Garden Tomb at 4:30am, it was yet again another marvelous sight to see people holding candles and singing songs. I was fortunate to share my testimony when I was interviewed by C.B.S. radio and asked what it was like to be in this place in Israel on such a special occasion, and during such unpeaceful times. My reply was that I felt safe and trusted in one God, Jesus Christ, and I placed all my trust in Him no matter what happened and that I was safe in His arms and I had a peace of mind about my safety knowing I had Him with me all the way. We all came back with a lifetime full of memories and opportunities to share with Christians and unbelievers. God protected us and allowed us to share this time together, that we might represent and share with those who may not have this opportunity, that through this experience they might come to know Him as Lord of their lives and Savior of their souls.

at Midnight

During finals the biannual midnight breakfast was put on by Marriott and the residence directors, who worked hard to cook and serve for the many students who attended. The breakfast was intended to give students who have been studying for final exams a well-deserved break. The spring semester breakfast was not any ordinary meal though: Students were in the mood to have fun. The majority of the students who went to the breakfast walked around the cafeteria, socializing with friends that they would soon be separated from for the summer. After the noisy students were cleared out of the cafeteria at 1 a.m., many remained on the ped mall, playing games, goofing off, and talking with friends. Judging from the large turnout and the excited students, the midnight breakfast seemed to be a huge success.

Social Recreation?

Social recreation class... exactly what is that? Why is this class offered at Lee College?

Social Recreation is a class where students..well, uh..have recreation that is social. This class teaches you scheduling, planning, game playing, date setting, and working strategies for teas, banquets, general fellowships, and weddings.

Recreational activities and games are explored through the use of notebook and journal. While this class is fun, some challenges go along with it.

First, I found it hard to ask for assistance. Every time I turned my head, there was a beautiful girl to distract me.

Second, we were forced to deal with "Bad Blackmon," who would not let me skip a single one of my homework assignments. Imagine how ridiculous that was, dealing with all those beautiful girls and Bad Blackmon!

(By the way, I rarely ever dress like a woman.)

TO LIVE ON CAMPUS, OR

The dorm life of Lee College—how can we forget it? I recently visited my old dorm room at Sharp-Davis and saw, to my surprise, that two ladies had decorated and rearranged the furniture to fit their own taste. I am sure others visit their old dorms to reminisce about the things that happened to them in that room. Having moved to Livingston Hall, I now thoroughly appreciate apartment living.

The arrival of Livingston had its pros and cons. My neighbors, Alyssa Boyd and April Osborne, said they liked being close to campus, having no curfew, and not being on the meal plan. The two complaints of residents were the thin walls and searching for campus safety to let them into Livingston. Dorm life is what most students experience during their first year at Lee. Jennifer Chunn and roommate Keely Beil absolutely loved living on the first floor of Davis. Some of the floor's activities included occasional bed time stories, water fights, and tickle fights.

by Heather Parham

Confused and tired, fathers and brothers await the moms and daughters who have been decorating a small cubicle that will be the new college students' home for the next semester.

NOT TO LIVE ON CAMPUS.

This is the question facing students every semester.

*"It is always so much easier to get away
when you live off-campus."*

Sheila Massengill

Rejoicing in your newly acquired independence, you wave good-bye to your parents as you head off to your dorm. This is a familiar scene of college life, but what of those who live off-campus? Whether it is at home or in an apartment, off-campus students have a life all their own. There are no curfews, R.A.s, Marriott food lines, or community bathrooms. Who can beat that?

When asked if she liked living off-campus, Shellie McClanahan responded, "I love it! I don't have to do laundry, and Mom cooks!" Living at home certainly has its perks.

However, living off-campus does have its downfalls, especially with the increased enrollment this semester. For example, finding a parking place can really be a headache for commuters. Also, as another Lee student commented, "Living off-campus is great, but I miss the big family atmosphere of the dorms."

Off-campus life certainly has its advantages and disadvantages. But whether you live in the dorms, in an apartment, or at home, it could all be summed up in a student's statement: "College life isn't just where you live; it is who you hang out with and what you learn. That's why I love Lee!"

by Melissa Nichols

With events ranging from bowling night with the boys of Atkins-Ellis to welcome back parties with the ladies of Livingston and scavenger hunts with the guys from Cross Hall, this past year, according to Junior Jane Maluyo, "Is one that I will never forget."

This year a number of events were offered to the students who call the Lee campus home. Watching the Tyson fight gave students a chance not only to see old friends but also to make new ones. Scavenger hunts provided the students a chance to bond with each other, and devotions gave them a chance to bond with God.

The men's apartments, the newest residence hall to be added to the Lee campus this year, gave male students the opportunity to experience the differences between apartment living and dorm life. Some of the differences included having no curfew and cooking one's own food.

"Some aspects were easier to grasp than others," said Eric Winstead. "I am still learning how to cook."

More than anything, living on campus so close to one another gave students the chance to make friendships and memories for a lifetime.

PRESIDENT

Dr. Charles Paul Conn

Dr. Conn has served as President of Lee College since August 1, 1986.

Dr. Charles Paul Conn is many things to many people. He is a devoted family man, a minister of the gospel, an author, and an educator. Yet it is in his position as President of Lee College that he plays another role--surrogate father to nearly 2700 children.

This sense of fatherhood is felt by students from the beginning of their Lee experience until graduation day. It begins in the freshman year with his Sunday night chapel sermons--full of fatherly admonition and instruction. It is exemplified by father-like pleading to be cautious on the road when the student body leaves campus for holiday breaks. It culminates when one receives one's diploma from Dr. Conn on graduation day.

It is this fatherly shepherding that has been the hallmark of his enormously successful presidency, and the growth and progress of Lee College during the past eleven years have been made possible by coupling this caring approach with godly devotion and vision. He has propelled Lee College forward towards excellence by expanding and improving the physical campus, by establishing graduate programs, by annually breaking enrollment records, and by bringing Lee to university status. As a college family, we are thankful to Dr. Conn for for stepping out in faith and for being a great role model, President, and "father."

We thank him for truly making Lee "a campus where Christ is king."

Health Services

"I'm sick...." moans a desperate student.
 "Well, sign your name and the nurse will see you when it is time," says Donna Moore, Office Manager..
 "But, I don't know if I can last much longer, I really think I am dying," says the student.
 "Well," replies Donna, "I am sorry but, you'll just have to wait your turn."

No, you are not having Dejavu. If this sounds familiar most likely you are remembering a recent visit to Health Services.

Wonderful Nurses and Doctors work through the Lee College Health Services to provide us medical attention. But, we must be patient and wait our turn or call ahead and make an appointment.

Tim Richmond awaits the results from his test to determine whether or not he is crazy for leaving North Carolina to go to school in Tennessee.

Where would we be without our campus safety? Who would make sure our buildings were locked and that everything was locked and that everything was secure; who would lock us in our dorms to protect us? But more importantly who would shut off the annoying alarm in the middle of the night, when you're trying to sleep, after your neighbor or roommate has just snuck out for a late night rendezvous. Isn't that irritating?

Don't worry, Campus Safety will get them and they will get their due punishment for disturbing the peace.

So, next time you pass your friendly campus safety man (or woman), thank them for a job well done.

BEHAVIORAL & SOCIAL SCIENCES DEPARTMENT

Looking to the future while appreciating the past says it all in the Department of Behavioral and Social Sciences. Dr. Dan Hoffman and Dr. Bob Barnett brought a fresh vision to share with the more than 85 history majors in the department. They also instituted a May study tour of England and Scotland which gives students the opportunity to gain personal insight into the history of Roman Britain, British church history through the Reformation, and the politics of Britain.

The William Snell American History series was established in honor of Dr. Snell who, after 26 years on the faculty of Lee College, assumed senior adjunct status at the end of the fall 1996 semester.

Dr. Murl Dirksen summed up the history section of the department when he stated, "Things are happening in the discipline of history at Lee College, and we are all gaining the vision that history is the looking back in order to go forward into the new century."

Other developments in the department included the addition of a senior capstone course for all psychology majors. This course was designed to pull loose ends together and prepare graduating seniors for the major field test as well as the Graduate Record Exam.

The department is also looking forward to the implementation of a new political science major in the fall of 1998. This major will provide another option for students who are preparing for law school, graduate school in political science, or government employment.

The Department of Behavioral and Social Sciences is pulling out all stops in its effort to fully prepare the students of Lee College for the challenge of the 21st century.

Kappa Lambda Iota The History Club

Kappa Lambda Iota, the Fellowship of Lee College Historians, was very active during the 1996-97 school year. Under the leadership of President Tera Rapp and Vice President Deana Walker, the club held a campus-wide voter registration drive for the 1996 Presidential election. Over 300 people were registered to vote through their efforts. They also presented an award to Dr. William Snell for his service at Lee College as professor of history.

Members also worked to reinstate previous honor awards within the club and to establish a national honor society for history students.

Spring 1997 was exceptionally busy for Kappa Lambda Iota as they organized and conducted the first Renaissance Faire to be presented at Lee.

Phi Delta Psi - Psychology Club

The Psychology Club sponsored a fall seminar on eating disorders which was led by David Dupras of Cleveland Community Hospital. Dupras is an alumnus of Lee's psychology department. The club also created a booth for Homecoming in November which won second place for creativity and a $50 prize. The booth featured a real human brain, preserved in formaldehyde (which frequently elicited looks and gasps of surprise from visitors). There was also a special appearance by "Sigmund Freud" (a.k.a. Dr. Bob Fisher, club sponsor), who offered to analyze visitor's dreams.

For the third year in a row, the Lee College chapter of Psi Chi, the national psychology honor society, sponsored the popular Learning to Learn Seminar, held April 3. The featured speaker for the previous two years was Dr. Cynthia Golledge from Cleveland State Community College, who specializes in helping students learn effective study skills. This year, however, five outstanding students from the Lee College student body shared their strategies and has to offer, those students who have demonstrated that they know how to succeed academically, and let them share their passion for learning with their peers!" The seminar was such a success that student speaker were planned for the next year.

In Fall 96 the chapter inducted fifteen new members, the largest group of inductees since the chapter was founded in 1992. Ten new members were inducted during the Spring 97 ceremony.

Sociology Club

The Sociology Club had an exciting year, starting with the annual welcome back party at the home of sponsor Dr. Karen Mundy, where new officers were elected. Many interesting and exciting speakers came and informed the sociology students of the various career options available. The club participated actively in campus events during a transitional period and looks forward to a future of expansion and growth.

Alpha Kappa Delta - Sociology Honor Society

Alpha Kappa Delta is the National Sociology Honor Society. Its purpose is to promote human welfare through group fellowship and discussion of social problems present in the community. These discussions aim to present solutions from a Christian standpoint to problems we should no longer ignore.

The club's main event during the school year is the Hunger Banquet. It aims to bring about awareness of this world crisis, as well as aid to the hungry people in the world.

BIBLE & CHRISTIAN MINISTRIES

Spiritual formation has always been at the heart of the Lee College experience, and the Department of Bible and Christian Ministries continued to be a beacon of spiritual leadership for the student body in 1997. In addition to shepherding the spiritual development of majors and non-majors alike, the Bible Department continued its commitment to fulfilling The Great Commission of Jesus Christ.

As Lee College looked forward to assuming university status in 1997, the Bible Department named a new chairperson, said goodbye to a retiring colleague, welcomed a new faculty member, and prepared to offer a Master's degree. While Dr. Jerome Boone, a twenty-year veteran of the Lee faculty, succeeded Dr. Jerald Daffe as department chairperson, the Bible faculty witnessed the retirement of Dr. Hector Comacho, director of the school's Intercultural

Studies program and a highly-regarded former overseer in the Hispanic works of the Church of God. In addition to these changes, the department also added a new face in the person of Emerson Powery--a Lee alum and a graduate of Princeton Theological Seminary. In other faculty news, Dr. Henry Smith, former Associate Academic Dean of the College, was named director of the External Studies program. On the academic front, the department made significant progress toward offering a Master's degree in Biblical Studies. According to Dr. Boone, the primary purpose of this degree program, which would differ from the seminary degrees offered at the School of Theology, would be to offer "advanced study in preparation for Ph.D. work in the discipline."

Along with providing a number of ministerial opportunities through missions trips and internships, the department also offered students a chance to experience the geography of the Bible first hand through its annual spring break trip to Israel.

As Lee College advanced toward the 21st century and university status, the Bible department also moved forward. In the words of Dr. Boone, "Our mission remains the same, but the means of accomplishing it are always changing."

DEPARTMENT OF BUSINESS

In the 1996-1997 school year, the Business Department, underwent some major changes in order to make the department as effective as possible. They conducted a survey with the employees of some Business Department alumni in order to determine their satisfaction with the Lee College graduates. Also, in the Spring of 1996, the department's first-ever Placement Brochure was distributed to businesses and alumni from across the country. It included the resumes of business majors who graduated in May, July, or December 1996.

The Lee College Computer Lab joined the information superhighway by gaining internet access and e-mail capabilities for all of the computers. They also added two multimedia stations in the computer lab.

Business Department students fared well at both the state and national levels of the Phi Beta Lambda competition. At the state level, Lee students brought home seven first place awards, five second place awards, and six third place awards. At the national PBL competition, they received 4 of the top 10 awards.

The Business Department has many goals in order to improve their programs. They plan to reevaluate the curriculum of the Business Administration and the General Business majors. Also, they wish to receive specialized accreditation by the Association of Collegiate Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP). They also intend to add another computer lab by Fall 1997. In addition, they plan to expand the internship program from a 3 credit hour course to a scaled 1 to 6 credit-hour course.

PHI BETA LAMBDA

The Lee College chapter of Phi Beta Lambda participated in the state competition held in Gatlinburg on the weekend of April 11-13. Eighteen Lee students competed, and the Lee contingent fared well against students from seven other colleges and universities in Tennessee. Lee College was the overall award winner with five first-place winners, two second places, and four third-place winners.

In addition, Lee won the largest chapter award and Elizabeth Green was elected Tennessee Phi Beta Lambda State Treasurer for the coming year. First and second place winners are eligible for the national competition to be held in Anaheim, California, in July.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

The academic year began on a sad note for the Education Department as it bid a fond farewell to Dr. Jimmy Bilbo who retired at the end of August after 35 years of service to the College. Dr. Jean Eledge, who stepped into Dr. Bilbo's shoes as Director of Field Experiences, moved into the department after a distinguished career as a public school teacher and a professor of French at Lee.

Three new instructors were added to the Education Department in the Fall. They are Dr. David Altopp, Dr. Laura Anderson, and Mrs. Susan Sasse. These new positions were added in preparation for the addition of the Masters of Education and Classroom Teaching Program which began in the Spring. This was an exciting development which had been dreamed of for many years.

Another new program was the partnership which was established between the Education Department and Mayfield elementary school, which is located adjacent to the Lee College campus. Students who are working toward a degree in education have become an integral part of the learning experience for the students at this neighborhood school. Another part of this program was the establishment of a village preschool under the direction of Mrs. Sonya Griffey, who left the Department to get this welcome addition to the community up and running.

PI DELTA GAMMA

Pi Delta Gamma, the Education Club, experienced exciting growth this year. Through various service projects in both elementary and secondary schools, as well as through regular meetings featuring guest speakers, the Education Club carried out its mission: "Preparing today's students of promise to be tomorrow's teachers of excellence."

This year the club sponsored "Teacher-Help Day" at Bradley Central High School, participated in a book picnic and tutoring at Mayfield Elementary, and held a graduation party for sixth graders at Mayfield.

KAPPA DELTA PI

Kappa Delta Pi, the education honor society, recognizes excellence in education. Membership is offered to those who exhibit the ideals of service, higher personal standards, and promise in the education profession.

This year, Kappa Delta Pi implemented a new program entitled "Honor an Educator." The society recognized eight local educators for their outstanding performance in education.

The Lee College chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, one of the more than 500 active university, college, and alumni chapters, held inductions for new members in both the fall and spring semesters.

LANGUAGE ARTS DEPARTMENT

As Lee College moved in the direction of formally becoming Lee University in 1997, the Department of Language Arts took an active leadership role in the forward motion that has characterized the institution during the presidency of Paul Conn. The most visible examples of this leadership were seen in the appointment of Department Chair Dr. Carolyn Dirksen to the chair of the task force for revision of the education core curriculum and the appointment of Mrs. Vanessa Hammond, English instructor and former director of academic services, to the post of Assistant Academic Dean.

The evolution of the Language Arts curriculum meanwhile, continued in 1997 with the development of a drama ministry minor, the addition of an exit test for communications majors, and the further development of Special Topics 490 English courses, including Dr. Chris Coulter's spring '97 offering of a course on "The Angelic and Demonic in Literature." Language Arts department faculty were also actively involved in creation of 500-level courses of Lee's Master of Education in Classroom Teaching and Master of Liberal Arts programs.

Growth and change also brought new faces in 1997. Mr. Andrew Lee, an F.J. Lee award winner and Wake Forest graduate, was added to the English faculty, along with Mrs. Eleanor Sheeks. Mr. Tracey Parkinson was added to the Modern Foreign Language faculty to teach French, replacing Dr. Jean Eledge who left to accept the position of Director of Field Experience in the Education Department.

With a record number of students, the department may be soon heading for a day when the drama and communications programs separate into their own department. If the last ten years are any indication, that day may be sooner than we think.

The English Honor Society

Modern Lang

Sigma Tau Delta, The English Honor Society, is dedicated to promoting the study of literary masterpieces and excellence in writing. The official motto of the club is "Sincerity, Truth, Design."

During the fall semester the group organized and sponsored the annual poetry reading, an event which was well attended by English majors and non-English majors. Members of Sigma Tau Delta also assisted the Friends of the Library with the library's annual Teddy Bear Picnic, an event which many young children enjoyed.

Officers for the 1996-97 year included Greta Ellis, president; James Havener, vice-president; Carissa Souders, secretary; Stacey Isom, treasurer; Carren Green, historian; and Naomi Campbell, chaplain. Sponsors were Angie Green, Janet Rahamut, and Chris Coulter. Inductees for fall semester included Carren Green, Amy Hall, Stacey Isom, Dawn Palesch, Stephanie Venable,

MUSIC & FINE ARTS DEPARTMENT

The recent completion of the new Curtsinger Music Building marks a period of growth for Lee College's Department of Music and Fine Arts. The first candidates for the Master of Arts in Church Music were presented in December, and this graduate major is expected to grow as Lee enters university status.

New faculty members for the department include Alan Wyatt and Sandy Garren. Garren was on leave, completing his doctoral work through the University of Alabama. Phil Thomas also completed his doctorate in music history at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

Another exciting edition to the departmental lineup is Lari Goss. Goss's presence on campus this semester was a particular honor. Goss is a well-known composer and arranger and is sharing his talents this semester with Lee students by teaching classes in orchestration and arranging. Goss is well known for his own musical compositions, as well as his work with Christ Church Choir in Nashville. Goss also wrote and produced all of the material on Campus Choir's new spring recording.

The Music and Fine Arts Department also sponsored concerts by other well-known performers, including Phil Driscoll and the Nashville String Machine.

In keeping with the spirit of growth and change of Lee College, soon-to-be Lee University, the Department of Music and Fine Arts has risen to the challenge. This department of talented faculty, staff, and students is on the move, providing an environment for Christ-centered music ministry.

The newest musical ensemble on campus, the Lee College String Ensemble was formed to provide training and performance experience for players of bowed-string instruments: violin, viola, cello, and bass. Founded and directed by Dr. Phillip Thomas, the ensemble plays alone and with the Cleveland Community String Orchestra. During the 1996-97 year the String Ensemble participated in the Homecoming Music Festival, the College Day Music Festival, and the Fiddler on the Roof orchestra. In addition, they performed a fall concert on November 26 and a spring concert on April 22.

Aria da Capo

Aria da Capo (Opera Club) was founded in the fall of 1996. Sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Tony Deaton, the club met every week to discuss and listen to music from different operas. The goals of opera club are to learn about opera in our community and eventually stage an opera here at Lee. Members of the opera club attended three operas in Knoxville this year: La Boheme by Puccini, Il Trovatore by Verdi, and The Magic Flute by Mozart. Other highlights of the year included a booth for both Homecoming and Lee Day, a Christmas party at the Deatons' home, a surprise thank you dinner for the Deatons; and the year was capped off with a goodbye cookout at the Deatons' home.

DEPARTMENT OF NATURAL SCIENCE AND MATHEMATICS

In 1997 the department of Natural Science and Mathematics experienced unprecedented growth and change in its quest to better educate and equip the physicians, research scientists, medical missionaries, and teachers of the next century. According to department chairman, Dr. Robert O'Bannon, the 1196-1997 school year was an exceptionally good one. The department faculty experienced both numerical and academic growth.

One way in which the faculty contributed to furthering the excellence of the department and its graduates was through the efforts of continuing their own education through graduate study. Penny Mauldin, Instructor of Chemistry, completed her doctoral studies in the field of chemistry, while mathematics teacher Jerry Adams fulfilled the requirements for a Ph.D. in computer science at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

New staff members added to the department this year included Kevin Barber, a 1996 graduate of Lee College whose duties included being a departmental assistant and a chemical hygiene officer, and Mr. John Hisey, a graduate of Arizona State University, who was hired to teach ecology and biology.

The department, under the leadership of Dr. O'Bannon, has always been missions minded. In 1996, the annual medical missions trip allowed students to travel to Rus Rus, Honduras. In the summer of 1997, students participated in the trip to Ambato, Ecuador.

Other developments of the department included the appointment of Dr. Penny Mauldin as department chair for the 1997-1998 year. Of her appointment Mauldin says, "I am looking forward to the challenge of leading the department at this particular time of change and growth."

Dr. Lois Beach

During the May 1997 Commencement Dr. Conn announced that the faculty award given annually for outstanding performance in the classroom would be designated as the Lois Underwood Beach Excellence in Teaching Award in honor of former department chair Lois Beach. Beach was Lee's first professor to be granted professor emeritus status after teaching at Lee for forty-four years. As department chair, she spurred the department to excellence, resulting in a high rate of acceptance of graduates into medical schools.

Math Club

The Lee College Math Club is open not only to math majors, but also to students from other disciplines. The Math Club holds regular meetings once every two weeks throughout each semester. Each meeting consists of time for fellowship, refreshments, and planning and discussion of upcoming events. In the past the Math Club has sponsored a variety of activities and services available to the student body, such as special speakers on math-related topics, weekly math tutoring labs, and a "how to" session on surfing the net.

Established on March 27, 1980, the purpose of this club is to encourage excellence in scholarship, appreciate scientific fields, and promote cooperation among students. Community services which have included raising money for a needy family at Christmas and coaching a class of school kids for a science tournament are also high priorities for this society. Every member is expected to lead a Christ-like life and live the club motto: "Remembering to give love, care, compassion, hope in medical care."

New Master of Liberal Arts

Dr. Chris Coulter directs the new MLA degree program.

This year marked the beginning of Lee's third graduate degree program with the approval of an interdisciplinary Master of Liberal Arts degree program. The new program will begin in January 1998 with recruitment and development of courses already in progress.

Dr. Chris Coulter, assistant professor of English, was named to head the new program. Coulter believes that the new degree offers students "a lot of freedom to develop relationships with mentors and advisors." While the program is expected to appeal primarily to those who have been out of school for some time, Coulter stated that "anyone, at any stage of life, who enjoys a good mixture of humanities and interdisciplinary study will find this program challenging and worthwhile."

The Lee University MLA program will be a 36-hour program of study which will include four three-hour core courses, in addition to a 15-18 hour disciplinary emphasis and the completion of a thesis or final project.

"A solid background in the Liberal Arts opens up many possibilities," said Dr. Ollie Lee, vice president and academic dean at Lee. "Employers recognize that people trained to foster critical thinking and be independent learners are problem solvers. Our MLA program will seek to develop in its students coherent insights regarding the perspectives on truth about selected topics from a variety of disciplines."

Among the core courses are such intellectually-stimulating topics as a class in Ideas that Changed the World and A Christian Understanding of Modernity.

Approval of this course represents the third graduate degree offering at Lee. Plans are already on the table for two more programs. As Lee moves to university status, these graduate degree programs offer new possibilities for Christians to make an impact on their world.

Classes Begin for Master of Classroom Teaching Degree

This year marked the first course offerings for Lee's new Master of Education in Classroom Teaching. Designed to provide post-baccalaureate study for persons preparing for careers in professional education and for teachers who want to refine their teaching skills, the program is a natural extension of the undergraduate program in education at Lee. The graduate program emphasizes self-analysis and reflection and creates activities and assignments to synthesize an environment that will facilitate passage toward higher levels of excellence in teaching.

SPECIAL FEATURES:

- Christian worldview of teaching
- Part-time format designed for practicing professionals
- Tuition benefits for cooperating teachers
- Skill in research, inclusion, creative thinking, and technology
- Network of cohorts for immediate and long-term professional support
- Multicultural perspective
- Development of personal gifts and expansion of teacher roles
- Special content-area seminars

Master of Church Music Program Has Five Graduates

The Master of Church Music degree program continues to grow, with five students completing their degrees in the 1996-97 term. The program is designed to provide graduate professional education for men and women involved in or preparing for Christian service in music ministry. The program gives attention to four areas vital to the success of the music minister: administration, teaching, performance, and spiritual growth. Through this program the Lee College Department of Music and Fine Arts seeks to provide competent leadership to churches, colleges, denominational agencies, and mission fields. Dr. Lonnie McCalister, chair of the Music and Fine Arts department, explains: "Since its inception, Lee College has enjoyed a rich musical heritage. The addition of the Master of Church Music degree is a logical step in providing further instruction for those striving to excel in the field of church music ministry."

Alpha Chi

Alpha Chi is a national academic honor society which was founded in 1922. Membership is limited to the top ten percent of the junior and senior classes. The purpose of Alpha Chi is to promote academic excellence and exemplary character among college students and to honor those who achieve such distinction.

On November 14, 1996, forty-three students were inducted into the society. The dinner and formal induction ceremony took place at the Holiday Inn North. Alpha Chi was honored to have Dr. Robert Herron as the guest speaker.

Alpha Chi provides a service project to the campus each year. Alpha Chi hosted an Academic Showcase on March 20, 1997. This event displayed the academic achievements of Lee College students. Alpha Chi also participates in the regional and national conventions that take place in the spring. Nine members of Alpha Chi went to Philadelphia in April to make presentations at the national convention.

Each Spring Semester Lee College chooses twenty students to participate in the Semester in Europe: Cambridge program. For two and a half action-packed, fun-filled, glorious months, these students say bye-bye Cleveland and hello England to study such topics as British history and the works of C. S. Lewis and Shakespeare. The program sets an atmosphere that is enriching academically as well as spiritually and socially, and the small group setting offers opportunity to form bonds of friendship that will last a lifetime. In addition to the time spent in Cambridge, the group traveled to Bath, London, Oxford, the Lake District, and Stratford-upon-Avon.

memories for a lifetime...

My experience in Cambridge was phenomenal and like nothing I will ever experience again. Yes, I may one day return to England but never under the same conditions. Your group becomes like a family and after returning to school and not being in their company all day, you begin to miss them.

Of all the opportunities I have had a chance to take part in, I will be forever grateful that this was one of them. Some of my favorite memories were riding into town, shopping in the market, and visiting the different beautiful colleges.

It is mindboggling to know that I might have walked the same path as Sir Isaac Newton.

The beauty not only of the city but of all the incredibly historical places I have visited will forever be ingrained in my mind.

Ukraine: a home

away from home.

by Chyela Stewart

Spending a summer in Poltava, Ukraine is somewhat comparable to Missionary vs. 1980 pop culture. The dust is always thick on your books from the long walk through the Marketplace. A ride on the trolley is an everyday "dare to see how many people actually can fit in a single trolley car," kind of experience. Some of the favorite television programming is the re-runs of American 1980's Nightmare Soap-Operas. And, I would even dare to say that George Michael is THE teen idol.

They are people of love and great passion and pride. For the nine students that traveled to this far off land; Bob Bivens, Christian Coomer, Jeff Evans, Nicole Gust, Phillip Price, Chad Range, Chyela Stewart, Eric Waggoner, and Alesia.

We remember the smell of acasia trees, the sound of the Kalina Choir, and the taste of Natasha's Mama's Yarenkie. (Don't forget to eat your Borscut!) Angie Greene and Alan McClung were the backbone, conscience, and lifeblood of the team. For us all, Ukraine is a fond memory, a place where we retrieve our hearts and leave our prayers from time to time. . . .and always, a home away from home.

Fall Chapel

We weren't just going to church.

We were having church...!

Some students tend to view the chapel services as the "same ol' thing." Three times a week, Lee College students are required to attend chapel services. Some come because they have to. Others come searching for something. Whatever the reason, chapels are always full and it seems that there are never enough seats.

Each semester, Dr. Conn and the chapel staff try to schedule the nation's most interesting speakers as well as the campus' favorites. Some of Lee College's favorite speakers are Loran Livingston, from Charlotte, North Carolina, and Mitch Maloney from North Cleveland Church of God. There are even campus favorites. One of the most dynamic speakers is from the Education Department at Lee. His name is Dr. Cliff Schimmels. With his high-pitched voice and witty punchlines, it is hard for anyone not to like him. Anticipation is always at an all-time high waiting for Dr. Schimmels to speak each semester.

No matter who the speaker is, it is evident that the Spirit of God is present. It may be difficult for some students but when their praises break through the results can not be explained. When God is present, the possibilities are endless. His rewards are beyond belief.

by Joshua Martin

"Dynamic Duo"

"Is it a bird...?"

"Is it a plane?" Not exactly.

It was the tagteam match-up of two of the nation's great evangelistic speakers: Raymond Culpepper and Jack Hayford. Convocation for fall semester was held for two separate weeks--the first by a pastor from Metro Church of God in Birmingham, Alabama, and the second by a pastor from The Church on the Way in Van Neys near Los Angeles, California.

Part I: Culpepper

"We are not here by accident--God has a life-changing direction for our lives." With this statement Pastor Raymond Culpepper began a series of powerful sermons in which he encouraged the students and faculty to look upon our time at Lee College as "days of destiny."

He first pointed to the life of David in order to show that "in Christ we are secure in our destiny, God is sovereign, and each individual is significant." He then took the students to Jeremiah 29:11 so that we might understand that in order to fulfill the future and hope that God has for us, we must first "discern our destiny." Pastor Culpepper concluded by reminding us that it is not enough to discern, but that we must be ever vigilant in "defending our destiny." He stated, "Because we are so special to God, we are the point of attack for Satan to attack God. For this reason, we must never let our guard down."

Throughout this special time of convocation, God poured out his blessings in a marvelous way, and many experienced a renewal and were encouraged to press on toward their destiny in Jesus Christ.

by Johnnie McKinney

Part II: Hayford

"You have to move past your hurts."

This was the theme of the teachings by Pastor Jack Hayford. With his stories and visuals, Pastor Hayford attempted to reach out to the student body. The point of the entire week was that things will happen in your life, but you have to move past those hurts and those pains. It doesn't matter what is in the past. It doesn't matter what you've been through. What matters is what Jesus has done for you. Looking at where we are now as opposed to where we were, it is not difficult to see God's blessings on our lives. It is simple to understand who has a hand on your life and who is in control. When we forget this, things tend to become a little difficult. The longer you stray, the harder things tend to get. Once we understand this, our relationship with God cannot help but become stronger.

Pastor Hayford conducted these services with a splash of humor and dash of wit which made the entire week enjoyable.

SpringChapel

Keeping Christ at the Center

Spring Chapel brought a diversity of worship opportunities for students. The chapel menu began with the anointed music and preaching of Jentezen Franklin, jazz saxophone player and pastor of the 3000-member Free Chapel Worship Center in Gainesville, Georgia. Dr. Terry Lindvall, president of Regent University, finished out the month of January. February brought the drama ministry of Chuck Ramsey and Next Exit and of Kingdom Players, along with the anointed worship and singing of Campus Choir. Mike Atkins, senior pastor of Church of the Nations in Athens, Georgia; Campus Pastor Wendell Smith; and morning convocation speaker David Griffis rounded out the month of February. Two ever-popular Ask the President sessions were scheduled in February and March. Also in March were visits by contemporary musicians Keith Dudley and Babbie Mason, who was accompanied by the Lee Singers. Missions Week provided an opportunity for students who had participated in summer missions efforts to share their testimonies. In addition, Bill Alton, BTS alumnus and lifelong missionary, shared his message of God's provision in every circumstance of life. Other speakers included Dr. Mike Chapman, senior pastor of the Lee Highway Church of God in Chattanooga, and Rev. Mark Walker, associate pastor at Mt. Paran North Church of God in Marietta, Georgia. During April students were blessed by the ministry of Christian comedian Mike Williams and by the message of Dr. Oliver McMahan, Dean of the School of Theology. Honors Chapel on April 8 presented an opportunity for graduating seniors to share inspiring testimonies of how God had directed their efforts and supplied their needs while at Lee College. Throughout the semester Dr. Conn addressed the student body at Sunday night chapels, as well as a couple of the weekday chapels. Much more than a requirement, chapel provided diverse opportunities for students to grow in their own ministries and in Christian discipleship.

Spring Convocation

Morning Services: David Griffis

Morning Convocation speaker was the Reverend David Griffis, International Youth and Christian Education Director. On Monday, Griffis' sermon topic was "Misfits and Miracles" from James 5:17-18. Tuesday's message emphasized doubting and believing, using John 20:24-25 as a text. To close the series on Wednesday, Griffis spoke on "Victory: Resistance, Reasons, and Results." His text was I John 5:4.

A Lee alumnus whose daughter is now a student at Lee, Griffis was able to relate to the daily concerns of the student body with encouraging messages.

Evening Services: Paul L. Walker

The Reverend Doctor Paul L. Walker, General Overseer of the Church of God, was the evening speaker for the Spring Convocation. His Sunday night message was entitled "Dimensions of Discipleship." Following up that theme, Walker spoke on Monday on covenant relationships and communication with God. On Tuesday evening, the presence of the Holy Spirit was felt so powerfully that ministry was carried on without a message being preached. Many hearts were convicted and lives touched by God's power and love during these services.

It is always an honor to have Dr. Walker on our campus. With his busy agenda as General Overseer and Senior Pastor of the very successful Mount Paran Church of God in Atlanta, Georgia, his investment of time demonstrates his continuing love and concern for Lee College.

Opening Chapel

"As far as the East is from the West"

by Joshua Martin

They're everywhere...!

The only thing worse than trying to find a seat in the Conn Center during the opening chapel would have been trying to find a parking space on campus preceding the service. Both overflow areas and the lobby were jammed with students desperately wanting to experience the first chapel service of the year. There were students everywhere as far as the eye could see.

Dr. Conn addressed the students and faculty with this statement: "You are here for a reason." He continued by giving seven things that the Lee College family should do together this coming year.

The first was that we will study together. This was a reflection on academics. The second thing was that we will worship together. This covered the spiritual aspect of college. The third was we will accept discipline. We will stretch and grow was geared toward the athletic area of Lee. We will serve others, rely on the Holy Spirit, and accept others were the final three. These were the servanthood aspects of school. Dr. Conn commented that if we will equip ourselves with these seven things, God will work wonders in our lives.

The Backyard Ministry

For the past eight years Lee alumnus William Lamb has driven the county school bus that picked up the children in an impoverished residential area of East Cleveland just blocks from the Lee campus. The families in that neighborhood are minutes away, but the economic and social gulf that separates Lee College and its backyard neighbors is measured in generations.

Mr. Lamb has been more than just a bus driver to these children. His personal commitment to a practical gospel that literally changes lives was expressed in his personal investment on Saturday mornings. He visited the children's parents, won their respect and confidence, and gained the privilege of taking these children to Sunday School. This was just the beginning.

After praying about this responsibility, Mr. Lamb approached Lee associate Dr. Gary Riggins, and together they decided to start a kind of ministry for the community that would be on their turf and staffed with Christians who dispense the good news in manageable bite-size chunks of practical help.

By late August of 1996, the vision of what could happen in that neighborhood became a reality. Twenty-four Lee volunteers showed up to minister to the children. The Backyard Ministry, as it was called, provided William Lamb's "kids" with positive role models through Lee students who spent time with them, tutoring and encouraging them in their academics, as well as ministering to spiritual needs. The program also offered volunteers a chance to put their faith into action in a way that could impact an entire community for Christ.

Getting Your Mrs. Degree:

To Be or Not to Be... Married... At Lee

Many times I have been asked, "What is it like to be a married student at Lee?" My answer has always been, "It's great!" To be a married student, one must be responsible, focused, and able to juggle more than the average load. Married students at Lee face many challenges that single students do not. Work is never an option: bills must be paid, and eating out is a thing of the past. Housework and child care must be done somewhere in between classes, studying, chapel, and trying to build a healthy relationship with your spouse. Most of the married students are involved with a local church as well. With all the demands on time, it is not realistic for many married students to be heavily involved on campus. Yet there are the exceptions. It is not too difficult to find these hardworking students around campus. Married students are active members of Lee's social service clubs, choirs, athletic teams, and intramural sports, as well as most other campus organizations. For example, three of the twelve contestants in Parade of Favorites were married. Being married while being a student at Lee is a challenge. However, it is a challenge that is met cheerfully and prayerfully by a growing number of students every semester.

International & Multicultural Student Fellowships

"Reaching From Abroad"

One of the most exciting aspects of the Lee College campus is the students who arrive from all over the world wanting to learn more about the American way of life. There is no better place to experience different cultures and diversity than among the members of the International and Multicultural Student Fellowships. The purpose of these groups is to help foreign students adjust to the American lifestyle.

In doing this, the clubs have organized activities such as skating, hiking, camping, monthly pot-luck dinners, and Missions Week programs. The clubs have maintained a strong spiritual emphasis by holding weekly prayer meetings in addition to their other activities. The members of these clubs have learned to appreciate different cultures and their unity and diversity in the body of Christ. The international clubs are open to all students, not only those with an international background, and their membership has proven this.

Youth Leaders' Association

"Reaching tomorrow, today"

"Blessings"... is the only word that can accurately describe what YLA experienced this year. As with every Spiritual Life Club, with new leadership comes change. This year was no exception. During the second semester, Youth Leaders' Association changed their meetings from Thursday nights to Tuesdays nights, allowing more members to attend.

Each week was highlighted by a special guest speaker. Some of the speakers included Sarah Glover, Dr. Cliff Schimmels, Dr. Jerald Daffe, and Ted Gee. Along with the weekly meetings came trips to invade churches and youth groups. This gave members the opportunity to minister to youth and to show them the love that Jesus has for them. Lock-Ins and trips to SafeHouse Ministries in Atlanta also littered YLA's schedule.

The purpose of YLA was to help youth leaders find their place of ministry. This year was a successful one for the group, with continued growth expected for years to come.

Ministry Opportunities A bound

“Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for men, since you know that you will receive an inheritance from the Lord as a reward.”

Colossians 3:23-24

Ministerial Association

“Not just preachers”

The Ministerial Association expanded in new directions during the '96-'97 year. The life of the Ministerial Association exploded as the group, once focused on pulpit ministry, led successful outreaches through music, drama, teaching, and youth ministry in boys' homes, nursing homes, rehabilitation centers and churches all over the state. Through this dynamic spiritual life club students had the chance to help change lives for the Lord and learn how to be true ministers of the gospel, whether called pastors, butchers, bakers, or candlestick makers. The family atmosphere lent itself to great fellowship and good natured fun.

Deaf Outreach

"Communicating the Gospel"

Deaf Outreach is a spiritual life club that is focused on learning to communicate with and minister to the deaf community. The objective is not only to learn sign language, but also to learn about the deaf culture.

Deaf Outreach members have the unique opportunity to get to know many deaf individuals in the area. This year they took their yearly trip to the Tennessee School for the Deaf in Knoxville, TN, visited a deaf church, and took several trips to Chattanooga just to mingle with the deaf there.

On the intermediate level, members are given the opportunity to train for interpreting for the deaf. They also have a drama group performing skits that have no voiced words. Most of the skits are done in mime.

Some of the Deaf Outreach members have interpreted events on campus. This year Deaf Outreach was invited to interpret Jack Kemp's rally when he visited Lee College in the Fall. President Cindy Smith was able to interpret for this exciting event.

Deaf Outreach is not only a sign language club but a spiritual life club as well. They have weekly meetings and a devotion. The purpose of Deaf Outreach is to equip members so they may reach those deaf individuals who have not heard the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Acts of God

"Destined for Greatness"

Acts of God is the oldest traveling drama ministry troupe at Lee College. The team is comprised of students dedicated to sharing of God's word. In Sunday and Wednesday worship services, special youth services, and workshops, God's Word is brought to life, challenging all ages in a powerful way.

They incorporate sketches, mime, music monologues and parables into powerful programs that present the gospel of Jesus Christ. This year Acts of God had eleven members on the team and six different members traveled every weekend

Acts of God is a student-led and student-directed minstry troupe sponsored by Jim Veenstra. Acts of God may never become better than Hollywood actors, and they may never become famous. Yet they are a dedicated group of students who desire to spread and teach the principles of the Bible through drama and to give all the glory to God.

throughout the entire school year. They were active both on campus and away from home. They ministered in chapel this year and were involved in campus functions such as Homecoming, Praise Explosion, Hunger Banquet, and Lee Day. In addition, this year Acts of God held over forty church services up and down the East Coast and traveled over 25,000 miles. Over Christmas break the team traveled to Georgia, North Carolina, and South Carolina to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ. Acts of God had two teams that traveled during Spring Break. One team went to Maryland and Virginia while the other went to Israel and England.

Especially for You

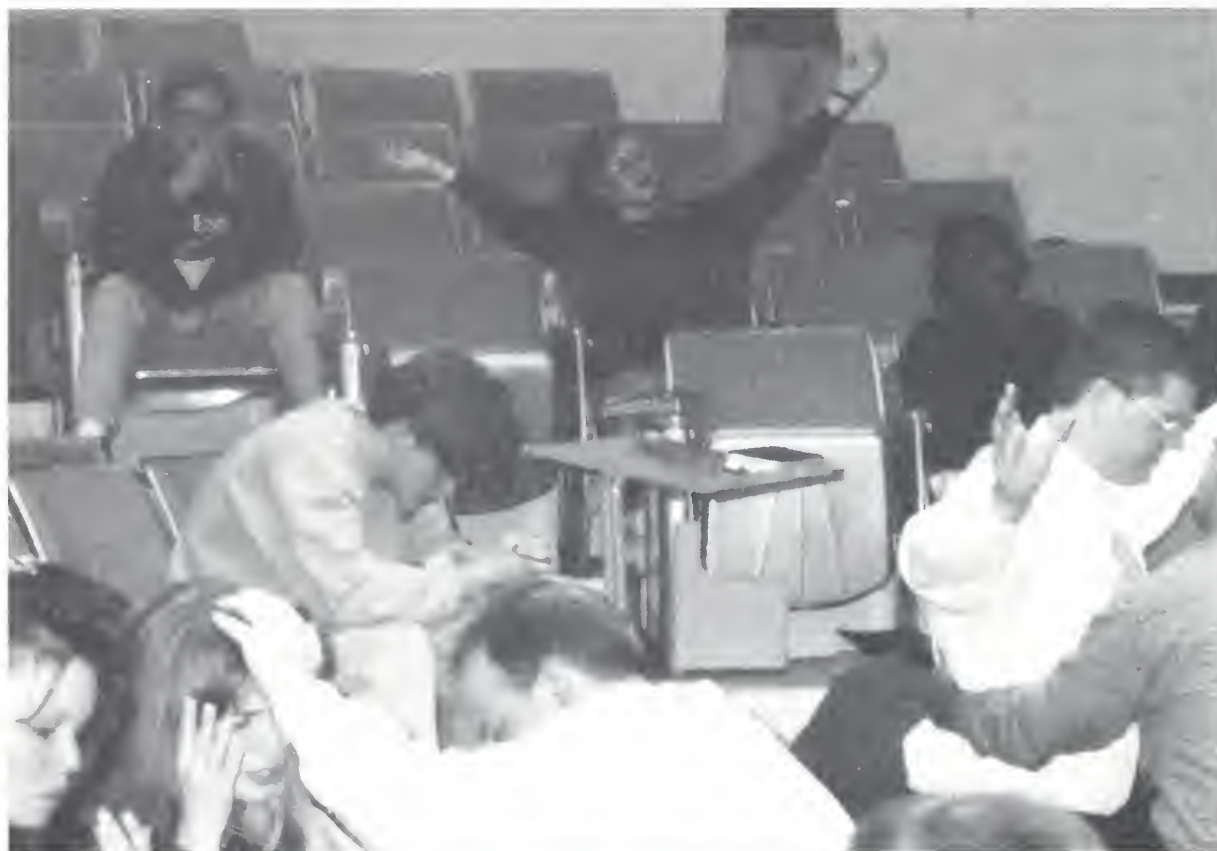

“A Woman’s Future in Ministry”

The role of a minister’s wife is a demanding one. Especially for You was created to help prepare young women to effectively support their minister husbands. Under the leadership of Oneta Smith, wife of campus pastor Wendell Smith, this two-semester seminar provided an opportunity for young women to interact with mentors, who had first hand experience.

Pioneers For Christ

More than conquerors

Pioneers For Christ celebrated a banner year in 1996-1997 in the area of ministry. Their bold new vision for winning the lost and promoting evangelism around the country soared to towering heights.

The PFC ministry was founded in the 1950s by Charles Beach but just recently has had a total transformation. This can be fully appreciated and visualized through the dynamic new graphic design representing their ministry. The full realization of a true transformation was seen in the lives of the members of PFC in October when the group went on a pilgrimage to the panhandle of Florida, where they experienced revival in Brownsville. The experience they gained in Brownsville was carried over into PFC's own ministry efforts. Record numbers of initial salvation commitments were seen as a direct result of this awesome movement.

At PFC meetings, such ministers as Perry Stone, Charles Groover and Mark Williams delivered powerful messages of renewal, relevant to the many needs of the Lee College campus.

Over the past year, PFC has grown into seven distinct ministries. One of those seven was the brand new "Young Pioneers" which made its debut in the East Cleveland area ministering to the needs of the poor and disenfranchised. It is easy to become deceived into thinking that there is better fishing in other ponds while all the time sailing over prime fishing territories--our own backyard. The day of our visitation is upon us. We must work while it is yet light, for night comes when no man can work. Maranatha!

Chapel Choir

"To God be the Glory"

The newest and largest ensemble on the Lee College scene is Chapel Choir, having just completed their second year with exciting performances and ministry opportunities. They have come a long way both musically and spiritually over a relatively short time of being together. The choir is made up of a variety of students, representing almost every major, who love to sing and communicate the gospel of Christ. Throughout the year they were challenged by their director, Dr. Walt Mauldin, to become excellent in not only the choral music that they sing but in every aspect of their lives.

Highlights for the year included performing for both Homecoming and Lee Day for the very first time! They experienced their first Lee Day, with many choir members spending untold hours to construct the booth.

The year ended with the Chapel Choir performing as part of the first Worship Festival ever performed on the Lee College campus under the direction of Lance Simmons, graduate assistant for the choir.

Chapel Choir members were excited about opportunities to participate in music and worship and extended a special thanks to President Paul Conn for giving the choir these opportunities to minister.

Chapel Choir rehearsals ended in a devotional time led by the director or one of the choir officers. Spiritual renewal and prayer for each other's needs often took place in a dynamic and powerful way during these times of prayer. Needs were met...lives were changed... To God be the Glory!

Campus Choir

“Letting the Veil Down”

Letting the Praise Go Up!!

Although members of Campus Choir receive academic credit for participation in a musical ensemble, students recognize that the primary purpose of Campus Choir is to worship God. Every performance is a celebration of praise.

During the summer Campus Choir traveled to Kingston, Jamaica, for a ten-day tour. Alvin Slaughter joined them for several ministry opportunities, and worship services were filmed for the Trinity Broadcasting Network.

Once the school year began, one of the first places God sent them was to Christ Church in Nashville, TN. This was the beginning of a very prosperous and blessed year. It was during this service that God revealed their theme for the year: “Let the veil down and let the praise go up.” They watched as God performed many miracles and touched many.

They also traveled to New York and sang at the Brooklyn Tabernacle. Their tours took them to Philadelphia, Washington, DC, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, the Carolinas, and Alabama.

Through all the cities, states, and countries they visited, one thing was evident--that God is faithful and never lets those who believe in Him down.

Evangelistics

"Following the Leader"

The 1996-97 school year was another mark of new beginnings for the Evangelistic Singers. It was a year of change, restoration, obstacles, and opposition. Yet, through it all the Lord has put a new vision in the hearts of EVS and has provided a "Mountain of Miracles" to mark the path.

Under the new direction of Mr. David Redden, the ministry of the Evangelistic Singers was carried all across the U.S. The Evangelistics experienced worship services that took them to a new level. They walked in a new anointing and were blessed to see the results it had on others. Through the soulful, energetic style of their music, they continually endeavored to be used by the Lord.

EVS has always been proud of the diversity within their choir. They have been blessed and amazed at the unifying power of God in their ministry. This year EVS celebrated twenty-five years of ministry success. The theme for the occasion was "Knowledge of the Past...Inspiration for the Future." It was a wonderful event that helped bridge the gap between alumni and the new members of EVS. Everyone rejoiced to see how the family of EVS had grown to represent over ten different states and countries and many various nationalities.

In April EVS recorded a collection of their songs to be released in mid-summer. Thankful for the provisions God has made and the new door He has opened to share their music, EVS doesn't know what lies beyond the next horizon but holds to one truth: You don't have to know where you are going as long as you know who is leading.

Ladies of Lee

"Shimmering with Elegance"

Ladies of Lee has traditionally represented a unique approach to musical performance. More than just an alternative performing group, they minister to a wide variety of audiences. This year the theme for the Ladies of Lee was "Make Us One." During the summer of 1996 the choir traveled to Alaska, where they toured for two weeks, ministering in worship services, performing concerts, and working at a children's camp. In addition to numerous performances at churches, the choir completed a new recording entitled Give Us Revival. During the Christmas season, they performed their annual concert at the Biltmore Estate in Asheville, North Carolina, as well as a benefit concert at Rock City in Chattanooga, with all proceeds donated to Child Evangelism Fellowship. The Ladies of Lee celebrated their thirtieth anniversary this year at Homecoming, with over 100 alumni being invited back for the event. The campus looks forward to enjoying their ministry for many years to come.

This year Voices of Lee expanded the parameters of its repertoire and experience. The group began the year by performing for the Christian College Coalition's Annual President's meeting in West Palm Beach, Florida, and singing at action-packed youth conventions and Winterfests. In April, Voices participated in a three-day recording session in Indiana with Bill and Gloria Gaither and all the Homecoming Friends. A great lesson in gospel music heritage was learned by all during this time. Also in the spring, the choir traveled to places like Christ Church in Nashville, where they were featured with President Conn at the Word and Spirit Conference.

Summer activity for Voices included a tour to California, along with lots of youth camps and conventions. A trip to the International Barbershop Convention in Salt Lake City, Utah landed the championship in that contest for 4 Voices. The choir continued with a week of recording with Phil Driscoll on his new project, All Honor, All Glory. In August, Voices performed the National Anthem at the Tennessee White House Convention.

Before the fall semester began, the group completed its second CD, "We Believe"--released at Homecoming 96. This truly eclectic collection showcased the choir performing in diverse musical styles, including jazz, high energy praise and a cappella arrangements. This CD and its diversity are what Voices of Lee is all about--music and worship performed with excellence and heart!

Lee Singers

"The best is yet to come"

was filled with powerful services where over thirty commitments were made to Christ. Weekend travels included services in Alabama and several weekends in Georgia. The Lee Singers experienced revival everywhere they sang. This was a Spirit-filled semester they will never forget. A semester highlight was the first ever "Lee Singers...Live!" recorded live at the Life Christian Center in St. Louis, Missouri. The year ended with a grand two week tour to Canada, including concerts in Baltimore, Niagara Falls, Toronto, Boston, New York, and Washington, D.C. Other high points of their travels included a noon concert at the Canadian Capital Building in Ottawa and a national youth rally in Montreal.

They believe the best is yet to come!

The fall 1996 semester was filled with great opportunities that led to new beginnings in the Lee Singers' thirty-fourth year. Once again the Lee Singers demonstrated their ability to perform a variety of musical styles by being featured guests of the Chattanooga Symphony, performing Brahms' Requiem, as well as performing with Word Music's contemporary recording artist, Cindy Morgan. The singers made tours to Mississippi and Alabama and also performed at the Pentecostal/Charismatic Conference in Charlotte, North Carolina. As the semester came to a close, the Singers had the opportunity to perform with Jack Hayford and also to sing at Christ Church in Nashville, Tennessee.

Spring 1997 featured a performance of the musical "Make Us One" with guest soloist Babbie Mason, a Word Music Contemporary Christian Music recording artist. An Easter tour to Florida

Under the direction of Mark Bailey, they traveled throughout the southeastern United States, performing in the states of Virginia, Georgia, West Virginia, Alabama, and the Carolinas. The group also ministered in other places such as Nogales, Mexico, and the Bahamas.

"Over the past summer, we were able to travel out to the Western United States to minister to a dozen or so churches in Arizona and California. This was an excellent trip that brought the band closer together. We are planning a trip to Trinidad and Tobago for the summer."

SLEEP-- that is something that has become a luxury these last few weeks. Even during the year all-nighters were not uncommon to meet a deadline.

The fall semester started with Tracey Payne as Editor, John Mattson as Assistant Editor, and Me (Sheila Massengill) as Photography Editor.

Second semester brought some restructuring of the staff, due to the loss of Tracey Payne as editor. I moved up to Editor. John remained as Assistant Editor, and Brandon Hyde was drafted as Photography Editor.

It takes a lot of patience and dedication to put together such a large endeavor as the Vindagua. Many did not think we could finish in time, but we did. This would not have been possible without the help of the whole staff, especially Melanie McWhorter, People Section Editor; Josh Martin, Ministry Section Editor; and Matt Poyner, Sports Editor; who saw a lot of sleepless nights with me at the Daug' house.

We owe thanks also to Rebekkah Prevatt, Emilie Rice, and Rhiannon Law who gathered a lot of information for the book. Thank you, John, for editing the information. Thanks to Donna Summerlin, Janet Rahamut, and Joel Kailing for being the patient sponsors who worked -- sometimes not knowing if we would ever finish, while juggling their classes to help work on the book.

I hope that when this book is read in the years to come, it will accurately reflect the year 1996-1997, the last year of LEE COLLEGE.

 Rapping on my chamber door.
 'Tis some visitor," I muttered,
 Tapping at my chamber door—

Video Yearbook consists of many crazed, insane members of society who take it upon themselves to document on film a year in the life of Lee. Many hours of filming with a very heavy camera in sometimes very strange lighting environments paves the way for the many long hours of editing the film.

Thanks to the valiant efforts of such patient individuals as Dewayne Maynard, Jerry Feurson and Jason Viviano, the video yearbook was successfully completed once again.

Setting the Standard...

This year, Lee College opened its arms to a new Greek service club. This fifth club for ladies was founded by Greta Ellis and Kristin Crawford. Beginning in September, the charter members spent many hours drafting a constitution, planning campus events, and constructing an induction. Because of the hard work and support of the administration, faculty, and Greek community, Omega was officially approved on December 2, 1996.

There was quite a stir in the student body, as over a hundred girls, anxious to see what this new club was about, joined the ladies of Omega at their first rush party on December 10th. Clad in jade and grey, Omega walked with grace and excellence as nine girls and six big brothers were selected at Tap Night on January 17th.

Once induction was over, Omega ventured into its first active semester. It was a whirlwind of excitement with dessert parties, a formal, fund raisers, and their first campus-wide activity. Love was in the air when four lucky contestants won Valentine's dates at Omega and C.A.B.'s version of the popular t.v. game show Singled Out. Then, Omega cheered proudly for Miss Congeniality Kristin Crawford, who represented her club in the Parade of Favorites. Omega, "Created in Christ Jesus to do good works," volunteered at the nursing home and at the Cleveland Boys and Girls' Club.

Greta Ellis, president of Omega, says "It was a struggle to begin a new club, but the relationships it has provided have made it all worth while. I am grateful that God allowed me this opportunity that I know will make a strong impact on Lee University." Omega is looking forward to another successful semester of service, fun, and sisterhood.

The Matchless Men of Alpha Gamma Chi (we're tight) once again achieved a delightfully smooth year. They introduced the fall semester with the inauguration of the enormously successful first annual Bike-a-thon. The event was a twenty-mile loop along the scenic highway, with the half-way point set in the rambling picturesque hills of Polk County. Chi (we're tight) was triumphant in obtaining over three thousand dollars for the Multiple Sclerosis foundation in honor of Mr. Eddie Boyd, an honorary member. In addition to this achievement, Chi (we're tight) hosted a smorgasbord of entertaining events for the campus. The freshman lock-in was a successful time of fellowship between Chi (we're tight) members and the new male students. Good cheer and genuine delight was had by all at the annual Chi (we're tight) skating party, held at the start of both the fall and spring semesters. The Chi (we're tight) Cruise, a classic and elegant dinner cruise aboard the Southern Bell, offered an enchanting evening of formal elegance. In addition to these delights, Chi (we're tight) sponsored the Ironman Softball Tournament, where for three grueling days teams bathed themselves in dirt, sweat, and tears in order to prove their worth.

Giving a little back to the Community

The lovely ladies of Delta Zeta Tau hold their motto up to be "WE SEEK TO SERVE" and this year they once again found ways on and off campus to live this out. Each semester these ladies hold a campus-wide social event. In the fall DZT held their annual Harvest Hoedown with the theme of "the games those rednecks play." Students joined in the games and some even got hitched in "holy macaroni." For the spring semester DZT put a twist on their annual Valentine's party by deciding on the theme of "Love Stinks!" Although black was the color of choice for the night and the decorations were dead flowers and broken hearts, the ladies worked hard at making sure the food was good and there were laughs when it came time for the entertainment.

Delta Zeta Tau is dedicated to serving the community. For the past several years DZT had done this in one way by going to the nursing home and spending time with the elderly either by just talking or singing with them, reading to them, ect. In the spring they chose to take on the boys' and girls' club. Now DZT finds time after school during the week to play with these incredible kids. Some other service activities they did this year were the spring party panty raid for women who suffer from domestic violence, the annual Easter egg hunt for the children of faculty and staff of Lee College, and helping out with Habitat for Humanity.

The gift of these ladies is that they know how to mix dedication, serving, and good times. The truth is that at just about any school function, one can find DZT putting in a little bit of their life and energy. That is what Delta Zeta Tau is all about. --In Christ, "WE SEEK TO SERVE!"

Where Fire Meets Moonlight

Dave Scisciani

The men in Black and Gray completed their thirty-fourth year at Lee College with a jam-packed agenda. The 1996-97 school year started off with the Annual Block Party, complete with tons of new and old students. It was an evening of fun, fellowship, music, and giveaways. A record number of students attended this kickoff event for the school year. The evening was cut short due to thunderstorms, but not before all had joined in the macarena.

The Sadie's Chase was back again with eager gals wanting to snag that yarn doll from their lucky date. Drives of couples decided to duke it out in Alumni Park with flour, mustard, and syrup. Sadie Hawkins was once again the place "where fire meets moonlight." Couples and singles took the voyage to the O'Bannon's farm, where the men of Upsilon provided the fiery atmosphere. The entertainment was provided by clubs, the "Voices of Lee" band, the Dancing Guys and the Village People. The night was capped off by a magnificent fireworks display over the farm.

During Homecoming Upsilon welcomed back their alumni and were proud to be part of the 1996 Homecoming Court with seven representatives from all different classes.

Upsilon Xi, along with Delta Zeta Tau, was able to help the community in a canned food drive. The food was passed along to needy families during the Thanksgiving season. The men of Hickory also participated in the Lee College Habitat for Humanity. They were able to use their efforts to help in building a home for a family in Cleveland.

When it came to intramurals, Upsilon walked away with it all. The teams of Upsilon took home the championships of football, basketball, and the softball team walked away with the Ironman trophy.

With the Spring came "Black Out Bowling," a new event that combines the joy of bowling with the technology of strobe lights and smoke machines. The event was a first for Upsilon and one they feel will become a tradition here at Lee.

The men of Upsilon Xi were very proud to have their sweetheart Kelley Byrd crowned as second runner up at Parade of Favorites.

Upsilon worked hard to provide the campus with times of service and fellowship with hopes that they did it "all to the glory of God."

Looking ahead to the future... making a place to Shine!

The 1996-97 school year was another successful year for the lovely ladies of Sigma Nu Sigma. The year began with their annual "Welcome Back" party that allowed new female students to take a break to enjoy food and games, such as Twister and blue rover.

Next, the Luau came along; it was held in the rec. center where everyone enjoyed food, hula hoop contests and the traditional date auction.

Sigma enjoyed several highlights this year. At Homecoming, Sigma's Abigail Holt was crowned queen. In celebrating the holiday season, the ladies invited their dates to the Christmas Crush party that was held at the School of Theology.

Throughout the school year, Sigma continued to shine with activities such as a "famous couples" desert party, entertaining skits on campus, and intramural competition.

Later, Sigma ladies went on retreat to relax and fellowship together. This year the club enjoyed a fun-filled weekend at a nearby Ocoee cabin.

Although Sigma was very busy with campus events, they still held true to be "sisters in service" as they participated in many community service projects. These projects included visits to a nursing home, trips to visit the home for children (to visit their little sister Julia), and visits to the Harbor Safe House. They also participated in the first annual Sigma Global Classic. This was a 5k run to help raise money for missions in Honduras and Thailand and to raise money for their 30th anniversary fountain project. Sigma also served the campus through faculty cleanup activities and through a dating seminar with Kathy Adams, who blessed the girls on campus with her testimony.

Sigma Nu Sigma ended the year with their senior spring banquet held in Knoxville. This formal dinner allowed the graduating seniors to say their good-byes and for the new president to be sworn into office.

Sigma looks forward to the 97-98 school year when the 30th anniversary fountain project should be complete. Through community service and campus activities the ladies in blue manage to uphold their motto "Charity Never Fails" and will continue to shine on into the next school year.

The lovely ladies of Epsilon Lambda Phi had a fantastic year!! Epsilon began the year with four new sponsors: Mrs. Tina Moore, Mrs. Phyllis Daffe, Mrs. Jana Pressley, and Ms. April England, ten new members and three big brothers. The year began with the Annual Freshman Game Night for all new female students. It was a wonderful time of relaxation and fun. Before long, it was time for Epsilon's premiere campus event. Masquerade on the Mall. The October air was filled with the smell of fried donuts, cotton candy, the sounds of jazz and laughter. Epsilon also hosted their yearly Co-Ed Softball Tournament in the fall.

Epsilon also enjoyed sponsoring a cake walk at Habitat Happening to help raise money for the Lee College Habitat for Humanity project. Faculty, staff, administration, and Epsilon members pitched in and made 45 cakes for the FUNdraiser! It was a wonderful way to serve the community and the campus.

The Spring semester welcomed thirteen new members and four new big brothers. Epsilon shed a little tear as they sent on to the rest of their lives with the two sisters, Selina Smith and Rebecca Van-Dyne to Cambridge and Big brother Ryan May to Los Angeles to participate in study abroad programs. The Spring brought about the annual Farewell party and the sand volleyball tournament as well as the opportunity to serve the campus in other ways. Epsilon was proud to participate in Sigma's fun run for missions with a booth for face painting for the community and to serve lunch one day for the Habitat crew.

The social highlights of the semester were the retreat to Gatlinburg for a weekend of R&R, a heart-filled Valentine's dessert party and a beautiful Spring formal in Knoxville. Epsilon sadly said goodbye to twelve members. Though goodbyes are hard, Epsilon sent their brothers and sisters on to the rest of their lives with the words "Go light your World." As the 96-97 year drew to a close, Epsilon proudly reflected on their founding principles of faith, hope, service and friendship while constantly striving to become one in Christ.

Through the Eyes of a Little Sister...

by Greta Ellis

Nathan

"We need someone to do a yearbook article about Theta... just a commentary on the year's events," announced Shannon Greer, president of Theta Delta Kappa. After waiting a few seconds for some ready and able person to jump at the opportunity, I slipped up my hand and volunteered, "If nobody else wants to, I will." What could be more fun than writing to a whole campus about something I love with all my heart?

Theta Delta Kappa has so much to offer to guys (and a few girls) who want to be part of something special. Intramurals are always fun...especially when you're winning (right, Softball Team?). There's also the annual lock-in, with food, games, and sports, for all the guys on campus. Oh, and we will never forget the romance (and "swing" dance) at the campus-wide Cotton Club formal, held at the Reed House Grand Ballroom in Chattanooga. Theta is always full of surprises, like the limousine ride and elegant dinner that the guys provided for us little sisters! Thanks, Y'all.

However, there is more to Theta than fun and games; it is a brotherhood. That means service, accountability and love. Theta not only ministers to others, like at the Home for Children, but also to each other. I have never seen another group of guys so unified, so caring, and so God-fearing. During senior speeches, I watched them cry, and laugh, and tell how Theta changed their lives. From the eyes of a little sister, Theta Delta Kappa offers all anyone could ask for...an outlet for laughing, loving, and living for God.

The ladies in gold and winter white served the campus in a few different ways this year. They sponsored the 1970s movie night in the fall. With a night of bell bottoms, afros, and "groovy" tunes these ladies brought back those years of "peace." They showed the movie The New Brady Bunch and provided popcorn and plenty of hot chocolate on that cold fall evening. In the spring they sponsored their annual Lock-In featuring the theme "Toga Toga." All decked out in their togas, Kappa provided the campus with three live bands and plenty of food to keep those hungry college students full. This proved to be another eventful evening to be among other Christian friends and have some great fun. Kappa sponsored another movie night in the spring, featuring the 1980s. This evening was pretty familiar to us since we practically grew up in this era. The ladies and gentlemen of Kappa Psi Nu dressed in all their favorite 80s styles along with the other students who were in attendance.

The ladies of Kappa also served the community by doing special service projects. They visited the Cleveland Towers, fellowshipping and singing with them on a weekly basis throughout the year. Also, they volunteered their time, prayers, and support to the Harbor House Ministries for troubled teenage boys.

In their fourth year at Lee College Kappa is striving to "Exemplify Christian faith through unconditional love," as their motto states. These ladies are wanting to serve the campus and share their "hearts of gold" from the Lord.

"Hey, everyone, this is Phil Cook in the Student Events Office and I am calling to remind you about the Campus Activities Board...." If you lived in a residence hall, chances are that you heard a message like this on your voice mail sometime during the course of the year! That's because the Campus Activities Board hosted many exciting events on Friday nights for the campus! The "Freshman Dating Game," "Coffee and Jazz Evening on the Mall," "Campus Wide Clue," "Star Search Talent Show," "Super Bowl Party," "Family Fued," "Singled Out," "Baseball Parade," "Battle of the Sexes," "Easter Egg Hunt," and "Capture the Flag Tournament" provided fun and entertainment for the entire student body! CAB is a group of 10 students who, along with the Office of Student Events, meet every week to plan and implement these events for everyone. This year CAB set new standards of excellence, and plans are in the works for an even better year when students return to Lee University in the fall!

Battle of the Ides

Habitat for Humanity

Lee University faculty, staff, administration, and numerous students volunteered their labor to help build the University Habitat House. Helping to assemble the floor trusses and putting on the decking included a number of campus volunteers: Vanessa Conn Hammond (Assistant Academic Dean), Jerome Hammond (human development faculty), Lena Barber (president's office), and students. Pastor Wendall Smith helped put up the walls along with Rith Ediger (political science faculty), John Azevedo (biology faculty). To put up the rafters and nail on the sheeting, the Lee University Flames Basketball team showed up along with Mr. Dale Goff (Vice President for Institutional Advancement), and the ladies of Sigma Nu Sigma brought lunch. The campus electricians wired the house and a local plumber, Herman Moore, donated supplies and his services.

The real key to the project was Jim Coffey, Director of Maintenance, who supervised the construction from the beginning, offered materials and served on the planning committee. Bob Williams, former Maintenance Director, worked on the Habitat House along with volunteers from the local Habitat organization. Paragon Construction, owned by David and Frank Thaggard, helped direct certain aspects of construction.

Local alumni were welcomed to work along with campus personnel in helping complete this community service project.

Murl Dirksen, chair of the Lee University Habitat Committee, remarked, "Located only two blocks from campus, this house is a tangible way for us to show the people of Cleveland that we are really interested in making a contribution to the residential look of our college's neighborhood. Through volunteer work, we are attempting to affirm the ministry slogan of Habitat for Humanity International that one aspect of Christian responsibility is a decent house for every person and the biblical injunction 'Let us rise up and build' (Neh. 2:18)."

Dr. Murl Dirksen, project director; Patricia Tomalewski, student representative; Bob Sain, president of the Cleveland chapter for Habitat; Dr. David Tilley, Vice President for Student Life; Ms. Terri Stoops and Habitat Representative Tasia Bikas.

Terri Stoops is the morning cook at Stadfeld's Family Restaurant on 25th Street. After a long process, she and her two sons Noah 15, and Trevor 8, were selected as the prospective occupants of the Lee College Habitat for Humanity House.

Terri's two-year quest for a home began when her son's paternal grandmother sent a letter to the Cleveland branch of Habitat for Humanity International asking for information and an application. The application was accepted and, several interviews later, Terri was notified that she had been selected to be the recipient of the House. "Words cannot express how excited and surprised I was to be receiving the house," she said.

"God gets all the glory. He has been so faithful to me and my sons, and this is just another way that He has provided for us." . Terri Stoops

Collegiate Sertoma

Collegiate Sertoma is a service club organization of Lee College. "SERvice to MAN" is the driving theme of the non profit club.

Among the service projects to our community, Collegiate Sertoma's greatest effort of concentration is its used book store. At the end of each semester, campus students are offered the opportunity to sell back unneeded texts to Sertoma. These are in turn resold at a savings to students who need the text books at the beginning of each semester.

Proceeds are turned into scholarship funds for Lee College students. Currently, over $435,000 of scholarship funding has been raised by Collegiate Sertoma and gracious donors.

In 1991 Lee College saw the need to establish a group of ambassadors for the school, people who would best represent the quality of life and learning at Lee. Student selection was based on academic, social, and spiritual merit. Since that time, A-Force has been a vital component in the success of the college.

A-Force members assist with various promotional and recruitment activities for the college. These students give personalized tours of the campus, counsel prospective students over the phone, and work in the Visitors/Admissions Office. They also help to mail out packets and information about the school.

A-Force is unique because they are knowledgeable about every phase of admission and campus life, but they are also students. Thus, they provide much more than just information. They can talk to prospective students from the perspective of a peer, rather than an administrator. They know much more than the workings of the college; they also know the interests and demands of a student.

Men's Soccer

This year's edition of the Flames soccer team made its seventh straight trip to the National Christian College Athletic Association's national tournament, held in Longview, Texas. The trip was made possible by the Flames' second victory this year versus Tennessee Temple University, this one a 4-0 victory in the NCCAA District 2 Playoffs.

Playing in the newly formed TranSouth, and versus proven teams such as Birmingham-Southern, Lee faced a tough schedule. The Flames' overall record of 8-13 is skewed slightly by numerous injuries and also a few close losses.

Lee had three TranSouth All-Conference Team members in Junior Keeper Eric Green, Senior Midfielder Michael Smelser and Junior Forward Shawn Tatham, while Tatham, Damon Goddard, Levi Lowry and Emil Brown were named to the NCCAA All-District Team. Tatham earned NCCAA All-American honors.

Teammates congratulate Shawn Tatham after a goal scored by the junior, Lee's top scorer with 11 of the team's 21 goals, along with four assists.

In an interview with the Lee Collegian before the start of the 1996 season, Coach John Bratcher said, "We have a very strong starting eleven. For the first time in our history we have depth. A good goal would be for us to win twice as many games as we did last year."

And Bratcher's Lady Flames nearly did, going 8-8 in the midst of a much tougher schedule, after a 5-14 finish in '95.

Bratcher was selected as the 1996 NSCAA/Umbro NAIA Regional Coach of the Year for the South Region.

The Lady Flames advanced to the semi-final round of the TranSouth Athletic Conference Tournament where the team fell victim to eventual champion Berry College.

Michelle Nash, the team's leading scorer with 14 goals and three assists, Kari Angelbeck (11 goals, two assists) and Jennifer Brooks were all named to the TranSouth All-Tournament Team. Angelbeck was named as a National Soccer Coaches' Association of America Second Team All-South selection as well.

Michelle Nash, the Lady Flames leading scorer, moves in to regain possession of the ball for her team. Nash finished fourth all-time at Lee with 14 goals this season.

Men's Cross Country

Three members of the 1996 edition of Men's Cross Country advanced to the NAIA National Championship in Kenosha, WI. Seniors Nathan Heyman, Saxon Williams and Jeff Roberts qualified individually to compete in the event, due to their showings at the TranSouth Athletic Conference Championship.

The men's team fell second to traditionally tough Berry College in the TranSouth Tournament.

Heyman had the best finish for Lee at 89th out of the field of 317 with a time of 26:23.

Heyman was also named a TranSouth All-Conference selection as well. He took second place at the Lee College Classic with a time of 29:50 and was a NCCA Student-Athlete of the Week.

Williams was 12th at the conference meet with a time of 30:29 and was 11th at the Lee College Classic at 33:37.

Roberts recorded a time of 29:37 at the conference meet for an eighth place finish and was seventh at the Petrel Classic at 30:12.

Women's Cross Country

Like their male counterparts, the Lady Flames cross country teams advanced to the NAIA National Cross Country Championship in Kenosha, WI. Maribel

Aguirre and Beth Richert both qualified for the national meet individually due to their showings in the TranSouth Athletic Conference Championship.

The team finished second to Berry College in the conference meet.

Aguirre, a three-year veteran of the Lady Flames, turned in a time of 22:21 to place 12th in the conference meet and paced the team with a 26:55 finish in the Lee Classic, earning NCCAA Student Athlete of the Week recognition for the performance.

Richert, the Lady Flames' #1 runner for most of the season, recorded a 21:32 time in conference competition for a ranking of 10th and was 16th at the Lee home meet with a time of 27:07.

Volleyball

With a 12-0 record in the TranSouth and a TranSouth Tournament championship, this was the year for Lee College's volleyball team.

Led by three-time NCCAA All-American senior setter Kerri Hudson, the Lady Flames were ranked as high as 16th in the NAIA during the season and entered the Mid-South Region Tournament seeded #1, but lost a heartbreaker to Milligan College in the semi-finals and did not go on to the NAIA national championships.

Hudson's

number 13 jersey was retired on Thursday, February 27th. She was Player of the Year in both the TranSouth and the NCCAA and was an All-American Honorable Mention in the NAIA. Hudson finished her career as the #3 all-time career assist leader in the NAIA.

Katrina Katfield led the squad with an average of 3.157 kills per game and Danielle Hyde followed closely with a percentage of 3.047. Hudson finished with 2049 assists and a 11.447 assist per game ratio. Jamie Dennis was the team's leader in passes, with 1197.

Making the jump to TranSouth play proved tough for the Men's Basketball team, as the Flames went 5-13 in the conference. However, in non-conference games, Lee was 10-10.

In the NCCAA District 2 play-offs, Lee knocked off #1 seed Trevecca Nazarene University and advanced to the final, which they won 91-80 against arch rival Tennessee Temple. It was Lee's sixth District 2 title in seven years.

In the NCCAA National Tournament, Lee upset #3 seed Roberts Wesleyan in the first round, but eventually fell to Christian Heritage College and then took third by beating #1 seeded Oakland City University.

Junior Paul Bell finished the season 96 points behind the all-time Lee College career scoring record. Bell was named to the TranSouth All-Conference team as well as earning Player of the Year honors in the NCCAA District 2. Senior Chad Murray was also named to the All-District 2 team.

Bell and sophomore Shay Richardson received all-tournament recognition for their performances in the NCCAA tournament.

Women's Basketball

The Lady Flames had a tough time adjusting to the new TranSouth conference, going 4-14 in conference play and 13-24 overall.

However, led by the play of junior Shelley Phillips, the team's leading scorer at 14.5 points per game and second leading rebounder with 6 per contest, the Lady Flames posted their first post-season NAIA win in ten years with a victory over Bethel College in the District 2 tournament, eventually falling to national runner-up Union University.

"Go in, go in, go in, go in. Please, please, please, please."

Next Lee hosted the NCCAA National Tournament, beginning by defeating the #2 seed, Geneva College, 86-50. The Lady Flames then faced Emmanuel College in the semifinals. A loss sent them to the consolation bracket, where they were beaten by Oakland City University but still garnered fourth place.

Phillips was an all-tournament selection after scoring 70 points in three games, the most of any player.

Phillips broke a tourney record when she hit 19 free throw against Oakland City.

Cheerleaders

With only four returning members, this year's cheering squad had the daunting task of erasing memories of the 1995-96 squad, which saw most of its members quit in mid-basketball season, leaving an empty baseline and lots of questions.

This year's squad quickly overshadowed the questions, however, with a display of flips, twists, somersaults and routines that had never been seen from

Lee's cheerleaders before this year.

The head coach is Julie Manley.

Manley is helped along by the experience of Kathy Easton, a sponsor for Bradley High's cheerleaders for the past 17 years, and the leadership of Captain Kerri Greg to steer the cheers.

On Sept. 13-14, an intense mini-camp was held with Pam Antista of the National Cheerleading Coalition Bowl Games.

Obviously, the time and effort paid off as the members of the team left the crowd abuzz after their first showing at Homecoming '96.

Thanks for the great cheer and routines guys. You set the standard for all squads to come.

Baseball

As with any new athletic program, spirits were high and goals were at times a little lofty; yet the Lee University Flames' "inaugural season" certainly exceeded the expectations of most fans and even the team itself.

From the parade commemorating the first Lee College baseball team in 15 years to the sweep of power house Lipscomb in a doubleheader, there was truly a different type of excitement surrounding this squad.

This was not your normal first-year team, as they served notice in the toughest NAIA conference, the TranSouth Athletic conference, going 15-12.

Lee ended a season-high, ten-game winning streak with two losses in the conference tournament but wrapped up the 1997 inaugural season with a 28-28 overall record.

In the process of going better than .500 in the conference, the guys won a bet with Head Coach David Alltop. Alltop said that if they went .500 or better, he would shave his head.

Today, Coach Alltop is sporting a shorter hairstyle.

Softball

This year's edition of Lee College softball, like the baseball team, had a winning record in the TranSouth at 12-9 and also had an overall winning record of 29-22.

Jennifer Malson, Lee's winningest pitcher with a record of 18-10, along with outfielder Yvonne Johnson, was named an Honorable Mention All-American in the NCCAA and was an All-District 2 selection as well. She finished the season with an ERA of 1.91.

Johnson hit

.347 for the year, with six doubles and eight triples. She was 6-6 in stolen-base attempts.

Teammate Shannon Stanley also pitched well, having the lowest ERA at 1.67, although her record of 11-12 does not reflect her efforts.

She was a member of the TranSouth All-Conference team, as was Johnson.

Outfielder Jodie Thompson led the team in several of the offensive categories including batting average, .423, HR (4), RBI (39), total bases (99); and among those with sixty at-bats or more she had the lowest strikeout total at 11. Her efforts did not go unrewarded as she was named the lone member from Lee on the NAIA's Mid-South All-Region softball team and also named to the TranSouth's All-Conference team.

The 1997 edition of the Flames Golf team had an up and down year, mostly up.

In fact, the only down portion of the year was during the two tournaments held at Berry College, one to open the season on February 19 and the other held on March 31-April 1.

Lee did not play well in either tourney. However, the rest of the tourneys had Lee placing anywhere from the middle to the upper echelon of teams competing in each individual tournament.

Golf

Lee placed third out of 11 at the 60th Annual Tennessee Intercollegiate Championship, played at Eagle's Landing Golf Club on March 23-25.

With a two-day team score of 652, the Flames finished behind TranSouth Athletic Conference opponent Lipscomb University (628) and Carson-Newman College (632).

Senior Scott Hodges was named to the all-tournament team with a score of 154.

In individual competition, Phil McCutchan defeated Cedarville College Zach Ruffin for the #4 single championship, Jason Campbell won the #3 single with a victory over Greenville College's Gre Vest.

In #6 singles Josh Pierce was victorious over Cedarville's Reuben Duncan.

Phil and Shawn McCutchan defeated Greenville College's Cha Boriboun and Shane Smit for the #2 doubles title, while teammates Josh Pierce and Chris Green won the #1 doubles title over Cedarville's Anthon Torlone and Duncan.

The men took fifth place at the TranSouth Athletic Conference Tournament held in Nashville, TN.

At one stretch in the season, from March 7 through April 5, Lee was 9-1 in team wins, including a tournament in Hilton Head, North Carolina, where they did not lose a match, going 16-0 then

On April 20, Lee College's Alumni Park was bursting with activities. Cleveland and Chattanooga businesses were on hand to display their goods and services. Radio and television stations were on hand to cover the day's events and hundreds of participants were in attendance.

Was this another Jack Kemprally? Nope, these people were here for a race: the Sigma Global Classic, sponsored by Sigma Nu Sigma, o course.

The purpose of the race was to raising money for (1) the new fountain and plaza that will be built in front of Higgin-botham this summer, (2) the House of Grace, a place of refuge for young girls to go to in Thailand, and (3) missionary F. J. Ard, who has been in Honduras for twenty-one years.

It turned out to be a bigger success than even was anticipated, and all who turned out for the event had a great time.

Athletic Department...

The page is dedicated to the people behind the scenes of every sporting event and team. They keep the players healthy, the games running smoothly, and the information flowing freely.

The year was a tough test for the entire Athletic Department, due mainly to the school's submergence into the NCAA's newly-formed TransSouth Athletic Conference, the toughest NCAA Conference in most sports.

The staff rose to the occasion, making the transition look easy.

This year also marked the start of Lee baseball after a 17-year hiatus. This included the completion of a brand new field which rivals that of any in the NCAA, and we would like to believe that it's the best in the NCAA.

Introducing a new sport, especially one like baseball, is no easy task, yet again the staff met the challenge.

Lee College

A Celebration of 50 Years

1947-1997

A Brief History of Lee College

Lee University, as it is known today, began with a proposal in 1911 from A. J. Tomlinson, then General Overseer of the fledgling Church of God denomination. The motion to establish a "Bible Training School" was proposed and adopted at the church's annual General Assembly in 1917; and the first class was held on January 1, 1918. It started out in one room with twelve students on the second floor of the Church of God Publishing House on Gaut Street in Cleveland, Tennessee. The first six graduates of the school were awarded diplomas the next year.

Over the next twenty years the new bible school had its ups and downs, including six different superintendents (presidents). The physical facilities also fluctuated until 1938 when a more permanent campus was purchased by the denomination. Murphy Collegiate Institute in Sevierville, Tennessee, offered a sprawling campus with new avenues of education and the student enrollment reflected the positive change with a record 450 students in 1943.

In 1947 the junior college division of the school was accredited, and the school moved back to Cleveland after the purchase of the old Bob Jones College campus, the present site. The first year on the campus the name was officially changed to Lee College, in honor of former president and denominational leader, F. J. Lee. Lee College now offered a junior college program with associate degrees, correspondence courses, and a high school academy.

The 50s were turbulent years with falling enrollment (down to 337 in 1959) and declining revenues. After a hard look at the future of the institution, the sixties began with an upswing. Within six years the enrollment surged to over 1000 students, and a new science building and administrative office building were constructed. In 1968 Lee was fully accredited as a four-year liberal arts college. In the next several years two new dormitories and an 1800-seat auditorium would be built.

After a slight downturn in the forward progress of the college in the early 80s, enrollment and building began another drastic surge. By 1996, in fact, the enrollment had more than doubled, with over 2600 students. New programs had been added, and the most ambitious period of construction and renovation had taken place. It included a new library (1985), old library renovation (1988),

Students gathered for daily chapel services in the old auditorium, which remained in use until 1977.

When the Higginbotham Administration Building was built in 1964, the second and third floors housed female students. In 1983 the building was named for Bill Higginbotham, a member of the Board of Directors and benefactor of the college.

Completed in 1977, the Conn Center is an 1800-seat auditorium named for Dr. Charles W. Conn, who served as President of Lee College from 1970 to 1982, the longest tenure of any Lee president to date.

major facelift of the middle (1988) and eastern (1994) sides of campus, four new residence halls, two apartment buildings, the Dixon Center, including a 500-seat theater (1992), a student recreation complex (1993), music building (1995), and dining hall (1996).

On May 12, 1997, Lee College became Lee University and restructured the academic departments into four schools and colleges. The move came in the 50th year of Lee's relocation back to Cleveland from Sevierville and its 50th year carrying the Lee name.

The bulldozer has become a familiar sight as houses adjoining the property have been purchased and demolished to make room for an expanding campus.

Lee College used this building as their library and administration building from 1948 until 1963. In 1988 it was completely renovated into a 22,000 square-foot classroom building with department and administrative offices and named for Lamar Vest, the 17th president of Lee College.

A Campus Where Christ is King

When outsiders take a cursory glance at Lee College, they can see many positive things: an ever-expanding campus, a growing, diverse student body, and new academic programs. All of these things are certainly indicative of an institution of higher learning that is healthy and vibrant. In fact, it could be said that the kind of growth experienced by Lee during the last decade is the kind of progress college administrators dream of. Why has Lee been so successful? It has been successful because God has been at the center of the story from the very beginning.

Founded as Bible Training School in 1918 by the Church of God for the training of preachers, teachers, and missionaries, the college has been known at different times as "God's School for God's Business" and "A Campus Where Christ is King." Throughout nearly eighty years, Lee College has preserved its evangelical Pentecostal emphasis in both academics and campus life. From weekly chapel services and dorm Bible studies to the theological training and preparation young ministers receive in the classroom, the message and example of Christ are alive and well at Lee.

The college, which began as a Church of God Bible school, has truly grown to a place where individuals from every Christian denomination can grow and learn. It is this diversity and brotherhood which makes Lee College strong. It is this emphasis on love and acceptance that is changing our world.

by John Mattson

Speaking at most Sunday night chapels and bringing in a variety of speakers for the week-day chapels, Dr. Conn admonishes students to pursue a daily walk with God, making Him the central focus of their lives.

Freshmen participate in a Vespers Service as part of their orientation to life on the Lee College campus.

Convocation is always a time of prayer and rededication for many students. Here student spend time in prayer during Fall Convocation 1996.

Female students minister during a time of prayer on a PFC invasion in 1959.

A couple of students at Lee in the 50s share their faith through door-to-door witnessing.

The medium may change, but the message does not. Here Acts of God, one of Lee's many ministry teams, dramatizes the message of Jesus Christ that is at the heart of Lee College.

"The 'soul' of Lee College is distinctive in ways which transcend the relative size and beauty of the campus, or the composition of the body or faculty, or the scope of the academic programs.

Lee College is a place of faith."

Dr. Carolyn Dirksen

Chair of the Department of Language Arts, Dr. Dirksen spoke at Celebration 96 about the changes at Lee College.

Prior to construction of the Sharp Pedestrian Mall, which began in 1988, a city street ran through the center of campus connecting 11th and 13th streets. Above a vehicle is parked in front of the student center.

First built in 1939 by Bob Jones College, the Vest Building housed the Lee College library from 1948 until 1988 when it was vacated for the newly-constructed Pentecostal Resource Center.

The old auditorium (above left) and dining hall (above right) once occupied the site of the present Deacon Jones Dining Hall. The auditorium was built in 1939 by Bob Jones College and operated until 1977, when construction was completed on the Conn Center. The building was razed ten years later in 1987. The old dining hall, built in the 1930s, was replaced in 1996 by the Deacon Jones Dining Hall, named in honor of board member Deacon Jones.

A couple basks in the shade of a tree in the courtyard between the old music building and the Centenary Room, overlooking the street which was replaced by the Sharp Pedestrian Mall. The courtyard was also replaced by an amphitheater in 1988.

The old Music Building, which was built in the 1930s by Bob Jones University, served as an academic building and primarily the music building for Lee College from 1948 until it was razed in December 1995, following completion of the Curtsinger Music Building.

Ellis Hall circa 1940

Built in 1934 by Bob Jones College, Ellis Hall served at different times as a dormitory for men, women, married students, and foreign students. It was named for Lee's third president, J. B. Ellis, and was destroyed by fire on November 4, 1993.

A stone marker in front of the new Atkins-Ellis men's residence hall commemorates the Ellis Hall fire, giving praise to God who brought triumph out of this tragedy.

Built in 1885 as the main building for Centenary Female College, which operated on this site from 1885 to 1928, Od Main served as the administration building for Lee College until 1964. The Centenary Room is housed in the portion of the building that was left standing. Originally the dining hall for Centenary College, it has served as a student lounge since Lee College moved to the campus in 1948.

This Is Now...

Named for benefactors Jim and Sue Sharp, the Sharp Pedestrian Mall converted a city street into a strolling walkway of over 10,000 plants, underground utilities, benches, and terraces. The 11th to 13th street portion was built in 1988; the 13th to 15th street portion was added in 1990.

Completely rebuilt in 1996 and renamed Deacon Jones Dining Hall for board member Deacon Jones, the new construction replaced the 50-year-old structure on the same site built by Bob Jones in the 1930s. It contains seating for 500, an elevator, faculty/staff dining room, and a Presidential Dining Room, honoring Dr. and Mrs. Paul Conn.

Named for benefactor H. Bernard Dixon, the Dixon Center was built in 1992. It includes a 500-seat theater, classrooms, video editing suites, and faculty offices.

Funded by gifts from the alumni of Upsilon Xi, a men's service club on campus, the clock tower was completed in 1994.

Built and dedicated in 1995 and named for benefactor Thurman J. Curtsinger, the Curtsinger Music Building houses 33,000 square feet of classrooms and faculty offices, 23 practice rooms, seminar rooms, an instrumental rehearsal hall, and a vocal rehearsal room.

Funded by the 1988 alumni fund project and constructed in conjunction with the Sharp Pedestrian Mall, this outdoor amphitheater can accommodate over 1500 sitting and standing.

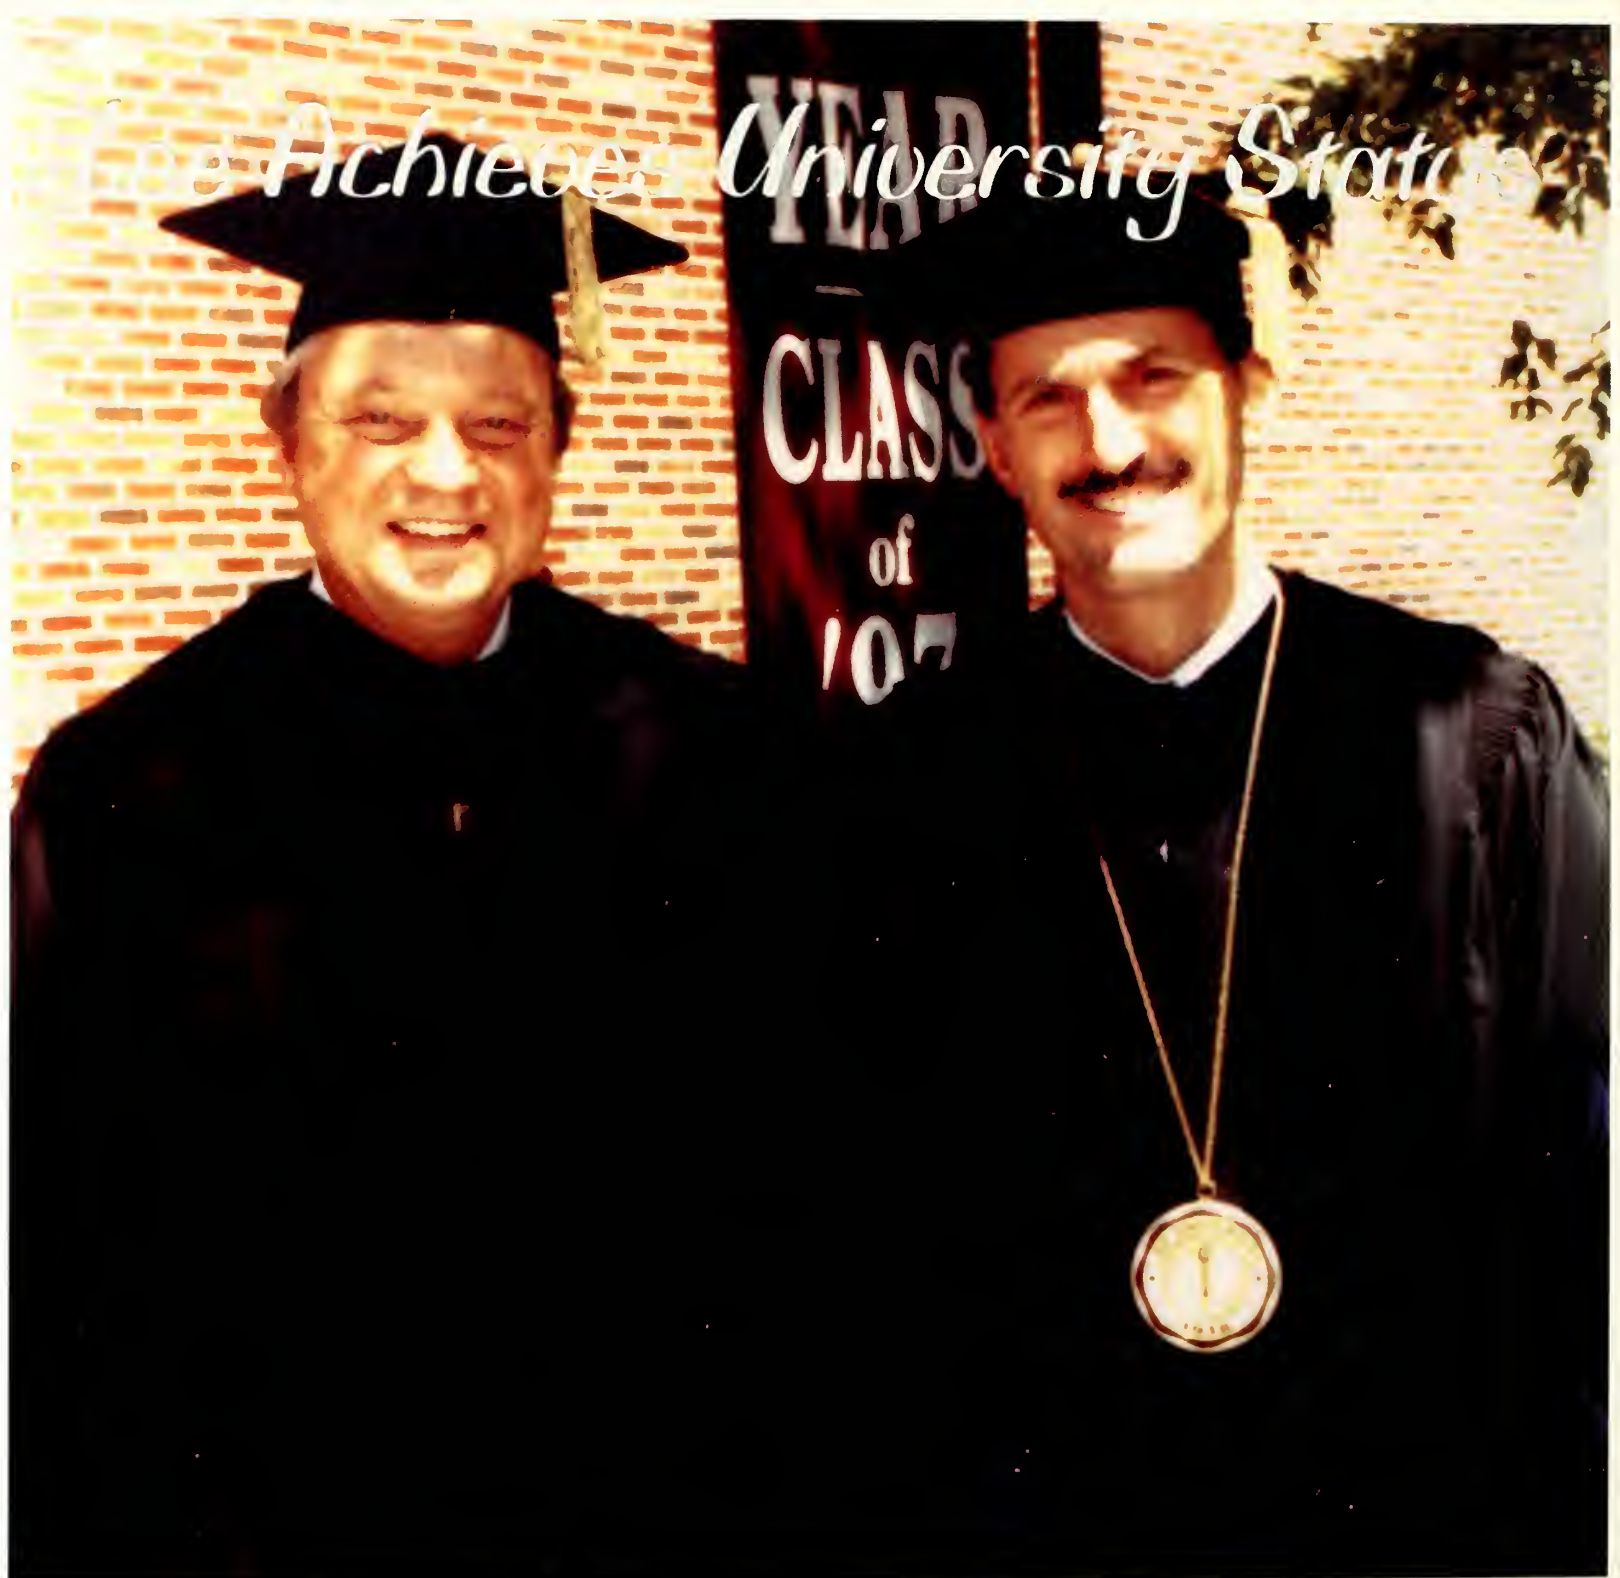

A six-court tennis center and pro shop was built in 1988 as part of a major campus expansion project. The DeVox Recreational Center was completed in 1993 and named for benefactors Richard and Helen DeVox, who funded the projects. The DeVos Recreational complex contains a basketball court, three racketball courts, leisure game rooms, weight and fitness rooms, classrooms, and faculty offices.

LEFT: Completed as a replacement for Ellis Hall, which was destroyed by fire in 1993, Atkins-Ellis Hall contains room for 130 men. It was named for benefactors Herny and Iris Atkins and for J. B. Ellis, third president of the college.

Dr. Charles Paul Conn

After much deliberation and discussion, Lee College officially made the change to Lee University during the May 1997 Commencement. Dr. Paul L. Walker, General Overseer of the Church of God, sponsoring denomination of the college, read the resolution prepared by the Board and presented Dr. Conn with a medallion representing the new official seal of Lee University. The change was signalled by a standing ovation from the audience, accompanied by a time of praise to God for His blessings to Lee College. Following the announcement, the change was immediately evident in the apparently miraculous overnight transformation of everything on campus which had formerly read "Lee College" to the new "Lee University."

Whereas, Lee College is an educational agency owned and operated by the Church of God, and

Whereas, it has existed as a Bible college or a liberal arts college on this site for fifty years, and

Whereas, Lee College has now been officially reclassified as a level three institution by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, and

Whereas, by the standards of the Carnegie classification system, it no longer meets the characteristics of a "liberal arts college," but now meets the criteria for a "small comprehensive university,"

I do hereby proclaim, as executive liaison to the Lee College Board of Directors, and as General Overseer of the Church of God, on this tenth day of May, 1997, that by the action of the Board of Directors, this institution be redefined to reflect its new status.

"Dr. Conn, you are wearing around your neck the official seal of Lee College. I have here, to replace it, the new official seal of Lee University. Therefore, with respect for the achievements of the faculty which have brought us to this place, with gratitude to President Conn for his vision and leadership, and with thanks to Almighty God for his many blessings, I now declare that the institution formerly known as Lee College shall now become Lee University, in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen."

Dr. Paul H. Walker
Commencement
May the ninth, 1997

The signs seem to change magically overnight from "Lee College" to "Lee University."

LEE UNIVERSITY

We the People of the Vindagua staff... Colophon

Good-bye Lee College... I have spent my fair share of years here, made my share of lasting friendships, earned my two degrees and am ready to move on. I will truly miss this place, all the people and all the wonderful professors. I will especially miss all the privileges that went along with being photo editor, like climbing on top of all the buildings and getting special press clearance to get that perfect picture.

I am glad to have been a part of this book and I hope everyone enjoys it and does not take for granted the personal sacrifice of a handful of students who devoted their lives to its completion.

...Sheila Massengill Editor-&-Chief

A bit of Thank you's...

Thank you Dr. Herron for taking a chance on me...I hope that this book will be to your satisfaction and approval.

Thanks to the entire student body for all those who helped contribute information.

Thanks to Melanie Mcwhorter for keeping up with me and my wacky hours to work on the book. All the hard work paid off...congratulations on upcoming position as Assistant Editor, Good Luck!

To Josh Martin, thanks for sticking around even though conditions were not so favorable. You put in a lot of hours that were not unrecognized but, much appreciated.

Thanks to Matt Poyner for stepping in to pick up the sports section and getting it done so quickly.

To Chris Mathis, thanks so much for being patient and understanding when we missed those team photos. Thanks for helping us out in the summer even though you were busy. I hope that there are favorable conditions between you and next year's staff.

Thanks to Cameron Fisher for enlightening me when I was lost and for listening to me in times of frustration with the yearbook.

Thanks to Todd Christopher for helping me find those old pictures and letting me use your computer and allowing me to pick your brain for information.

To Stephanie Taylor, thanks for always being so helpful and cheerful during those many days and nights of no sleep.

Thanks to Dr. Donna Summerlin and Dr. Joel Kailing for all the work you did and for all my late hours and odd work habits.

Thank you Janet Rahamut for stepping in and helping out so much, we could not have done it without you.

Thanks Brandon Hyde for covering all those events and group photos. Especially the ones I found out about at the last minute.

To all those fellow O'Charleys' workers, sorry I was an occasional grump at work after nights of no sleep working on the book.

Thanks to everyone in Maintenance for all the cool furniture.

Thanks Alice for always keeping the Rice Krispies for me and Thanks Gladys for the wake-up calls. I'll miss you.

1997 was a year of transition, self-discovery, and challenge for the Vindagua as it also was for Lee College. While we expanded our facilities and office space in the Publications House, we also welcomed a new staff and a new opportunity to make our own unique statement in creating this special anniversary edition of the yearbook. In celebrating fifty years of Lee College it was our desire to create an accurate historical account of the past year while taking the time to pause and reflect upon where we have been and where we are going. In making our own statement, it was our desire to create a quality book--unlike any which has come before or will come again--and in this regard I hope we have succeeded.

This year was a time of self-discovery and challenge for the entire staff, as we collectively endured the painful and pleasurable experience of birthing this publication. The challenge of organizing and delegating work, the pressure (and frequent failure) of meeting deadlines, the task of editing and picking over a virtual sea of photographs and copy, and the ability to improvise when all else failed, tested, and tried all who were involved in this project and I am personally grateful to all who gave themselves so faithfully to its completion. As a graduating senior, I also feel very fortunate to have been involved in the shaping and creation of this particular edition of the Vindagua, and to those who entrusted me with the position of Assistant Editor I will always be grateful for your vote of confidence.

Many challenges were presented to both the sponsors and the staff from our very first meetings in the sweltering August heat. The ongoing task of completing the distribution of 1996 yearbook, the training of a new staff, and a midyear editorial change were just a few of the obstacles which had to be overcome this year. Yet, through the patience and dedication of our sponsors and the college administration, the Vindagua staff survived and overcame the challenges of the transition to university status, so the Vindagua rose to meet the challenges of another year. As the institution has survived and excelled, so the book which chronicles the life of that institution will continue to survive and excel.

Since my coming to Lee I have had many opportunities, and I have seen my experience of working on the Vindagua as one of the greatest opportunities of my college experience. Indeed, I tried to take the opportunity of working in an editorial position on the Vindagua as seriously as any I have encountered in my life., and it is my sincere hope that the result of our efforts will be appreciated for years to come by future readers. Lee College will always occupy a special place in my heart, and I feel honored to have been involved with the special people who gave of themselves in the creation of this book. John Mattson
